Owners and Lewis Fail to Agree

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—Soft coal wage negotiations between the mine operators and John L. Lewis broke down today. The next move was up to the war labor board, and all signs pointed to government seizure of struck mines.

Mine operators said they would report to the WLB tomorrow that they and the United Mine Workers are stalemated on wage demands after five weeks of negotiations.

Lewis technically kept the negotiations alive by succeeding in defeating a motion to recess indefinitely.

Operators Reverse Decision.

The operators, after previously announcing they would not attend the scheduled resumption of negotiations Saturday morning, later reversed their decision and decided to attend.

An operator source said "technically the negotiations have not collapsed because under the rules and procedure we are in session tomorrow, but it does not mean anything."

The WLB wired Charles O'Neill, operators' negotiating chairman, Lewis, and the coal conference that it will meet tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. "to receive the report of the parties as to the status of their collective bargaining negotiations." Lewis hinted he would appear before the board or send a representative.

Lewis Calls Committee

Lewis summoned his 250 man policy committee to a meeting Monday at 3:30 p. m. to determine the course of UMW action. It was understood that the various offers of the operators would be discussed.

More than 500 soft coal mines were reported down today, one day after Chairman George W. Taylor of the WLB said formally that unless they reopen promptly the government will take over.

A week ago Lewis agreed to a 30 day extension, until May 1, of the expired working contract, but thousands of miners in the field decided to stay away from work.

K. C. Adams, editor of the Union Journal, disclaimed all UMW responsibility for the idleness, saying: "No work stoppage in any mine has been inspired by the UMW wherever the operators and management have agreed to meet the terms of the extended agreement.

Charges Local Differences.

"We are not responsible for differences which arise locally and become aggravated between management and men."

Adams said in defense of the thousands of miners away from work that they are just physically "tired out" after strenuous labor in breaking all production records in the last 18 months.

No accurate figure was available on the total number of men out, but it ran into the tens of thousands—38,347 in Pennsylvania alone.

In event of government seizure, Interior Secretary Ickes, as solid fuels administrator, probably would be chosen, as he was in 1943, to be the federal mine boss.

Blast Furnaces Banked

The Republic Steel corporation said today it had banked one of its Cleveland, O., blast furnaces and one at Gadsden, Ala., to conserve what coal it has. Other steel companies reported similar preparations.

The back to work situation was spotty. Some big mines reopened and some small ones shut down.

9 Go Into Elevator Built for 5; Trapped One Hour

Nine women employees of the D. A. Bielzoff Products company, a bottling works at 1109 S. State st., squeezed into an automatic elevator built for five in their haste to get home from work yesterday. The strain jammed a cable, stalled the car between floors, and trapped the passengers for one hour. Firemen rescued them.

Gambler Slain from Ambush on West Side

Willie Tarsch, alias Kolatch, 45, west side gambler and one-time partner of the slain Ben [Little Zukie] Zuckerman, was assassinated early today in a gangway at the rear of a building at 3710 W. Roosevelt rd.

Tarsch's body was found after patrons in a restaurant at 3714 Roosevelt rd. heard three shotgun blasts. Tarsch was struck in the head and apparently died immediately.

Called from Restaurant.

Detectives reported that Tarsch had been called from the restaurant by an unidentified man, who apparently lured him into the gangway to a spot about 40 feet back from the sidewalk, where he was ambushed.

No witnesses were found immediately who had seen the assassins or who could describe fully the man who lured Tarsch to his death.

Police reported they were investigating reports that a gambling house was in operation in one of the buildings adjoining the gangway at the time of the shooting.

Zuckerman Also Ambushed

Tarsch, who lived at 1855 S. Kominsky av., was ambushed in almost the same manner as Zuckerman, who was shot down in front of his home at 4042 Wilcox st., on Jan. 14, 1944. Zuckerman was long notorious as gambling czar of the 24th ward, solidly Democratic stronghold.

Tarsch likewise was an intimate of Zuckerman's old gambling partner, Ben Glaser, who suffered a fatal heart attack when he heard about Little Zukie's assassination.

After Zuckerman's murder, Tarsch was identified as part owner of Glaser's R & K restaurant at 3216 Roosevelt rd., a widely known gambling house. Zuckerman operated the gambling interests, with Glaser as the brains of their enterprise. Detectives traced Tarsch's activities in recent months to determine whether there was a connection between his murder and the slaying of Dago Lawrence Mangano.

Tarsch often had been arrested, according to police records, but never had been convicted on any charge.

MARSHALL ASKS U.S. BACKING ON V-E DAY SHIFT

Washington, D. C., April 6 [Special] — Gen. Marshall today defended army plans for moving troops direct from Europe to Asia after the European victory and admitted the army's one big worry is that both troops and their folks at home will be disheartened because soldiers cannot have vacations with their families.

Marshall said the moment the European war ends "it is imperative that we start the movement thru the Suez and thru the Panama canal of the units needed in highest priority for the acceleration of the campaign in the Pacific." He appealed for public support during the period of that movement, which he said will be an even more critical time than the present for the army.

Any delay in the far eastern campaign means unnecessary loss of life, Marshall told an Army day luncheon of the Military Order of the World War here. "It is not merely a question of how long would be the delay in terms of days," he said, "but rather one of how much of reorganization for renewed resistance the Japanese would be able to effect by reason of that delay."

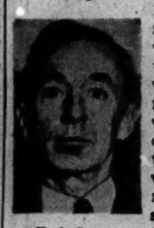
CONQUERING THE WORLD

REPORT SPEAKER GREEN SLUGGED

Office Silent on Cause of 'Illness'

Springfield, Ill., April 6 [Special]—When Speaker Hugh Green of the Illinois house of representatives was absent from the rostrum this week it was announced that he was ill with a cold. But tonight the hotel lobbies were buzzing with reports that the speaker had been slugged and was confined to bed by his injuries.



Hugh Green.

Secretaries of the speaker said that he was at the home of a friend in Springfield but declined to name the friend. The secretaries said he would probably issue a statement Monday when he returns to his duties as presiding officer.

No Record at Hospitals.

Majority Leader Harris [R., Lincoln], with whom the speaker works closely, tonight said that the report of the slugging was news to him. Springfield police and hospitals had no record of any such incident. But a friend of Speaker Green admitted that Green told him he had been beaten by an ex-convict whom he had prosecuted while he was state's attorney of Morgan county in 1924-'32.

Reputed Assailant Nameless

The speaker is said to have told his friend that that he was not ready to take any action against his assailant. Nor did Speaker Green want to disclose his assailant's name for fear that his friends would carry revenge too far.

Paris Shuns Prodigal Women; Freed Hordes Swamp Allies

Rags and Tatters

BY ROBERT SAGE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, April 6—What to do with 53,000 women who voluntarily left France to work in Germany and are now beginning to be repatriated is providing an unexpected headache here.

Abbe Bousquet of the aumonerie generale [general chaplaincy] announced today that since neither the ministry of prisoners and deportees nor any one else had thought of the question, his organization plans to take care of as many of the returning female collaborators as possible in a new home to be opened next week in Paris.

On every train loaded with liberated war prisoners which pulls into the Gare de l'Est, there are two or three dozen of these girls and women who have come home in disgrace. They are mostly clad in rags and tatters; none has a hat and few have stockings. At least half of them are wearing men's castoff trousers. One girl arriving today was garbed in a man's full dress suit and plug hat. They are tired, bedraggled, and discouraged.

Jeers and Insults

As the wretched little groups file out with downcast eyes, the women are subjected to the jeers and insults of the men on the platform and the wives who have spent days at the station waiting for their prisoner husbands to return.

They are led into the station canteen, past the joyous prisoners at tables, and finally served a meal in an isolated corner of the big dining room. Unlike the returning prisoners and deportees, they receive no present of 1,000 francs [$20], nor do they get a Red Cross package. After their meal they are taken to a police station, where they are questioned.

Treated with Contempt

"The only place they have to go is the sidewalk—from which many o them came," said Abbe Bousquet as he watched the miserable group moving out of the station today. "These girls are girls in a sorry plight. They are despised here, and in Germany they were treated with contempt. I know, because I was a chaplain among foreign workers in Berlin.

"They behaved disgracefully, and the Germans liked to believe all French women are like them. Yet we shouldn't be too hard on them. Or the last train was a girl with tears in her eyes. She said to me, 'I've suffered enough. The Germans kept me in prison 11 months. I've made a great mistake, but I believe I have expiated it.'"

Welling Human Tide

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

HDQ. U. S. 9TH ARMY, April 5 [Delayed]—Day after day under streaming skies, Germany's flotsam of displaced persons flows westward. Once slave laborers, these liberated Russians, Poles, Frenchmen, Belgians, and Dutchmen struggle ceaselessly to leave the scenes of their starvation and shame.

Down either side of the roads they meander like twin gutters of humanity. On foot are these foreigners in contrast to German war prisoners who roar past them in trucks. Those who ride are prisoners, those who walk are free men.

Problem Growing

Repatriation of the millions of Germany's displaced persons, called "D. P.'s," was only a plan a few weeks ago but already has become a problem. In view of the army's admitted unpreparedness to cope with the rapidly developing situation, it is a problem that may become an emergency with risky potentialities.

The army's policy for dealing with 6 to 8 millions of slave laborers and allied war prisoners who may be liberated by the advance into Germany has been to encourage them to stay where they are.

If they will "stay put" the army promises the freed allied laborers that Germany will be forced to feed and clothe them. Allied war prisoners are promised that they will be given the same rations as allied armies. When the opportunity offers, those from western Europe will be transported back to their homes and Russians will be shipped eastward when a junction is made with the Red army.

But the plan, tho it may be sound, is not working well. In addition to the natural desire to flee a place of one's degradation, many of the millions concerned in the army's plans don't know what is expected of them.

Russians Not Informed

Part of the army's plan was to print polylingual posters instructing the D. P.'s and war prisoners what to do. This is most necessary for the information of liberated Russians who form the largest proportion of the displaced persons, and whose language few American officers speak.

However, the 9th army's civil affairs branch, which deals with D. P.'s, has printed 100,000 posters and ordered 100,000 more in Polish, German, French, and English but none in Russian. A high officer of the branch explained it had been impossible to obtain any Russian type for printing posters in that language.

ALLIED ARMIES SMASH NAZIS' LINE ON WESER

PARIS, April 7 [Saturday]—(AP)—A relentless tide of allied tanks and troops—sometimes sweeping ahead 40 to 60 miles—broke the Weser river line 18 miles from Hannover yesterday, virtually sealed off Holland and engulfed Hamm and Wuerzburg.

An unconfirmed German broadcast said Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army forces had spurted 40 miles east into Martin Luther's birthplace of Eisleben, in Saxony, 90 miles southwest of Berlin, striking with air borne tanks.

The Weser river line was ripped to shreds by multiple British 2d and United States 9th army crossings as the United States 1st army jumped into the swelling attack with a 22 mile push to the river.

Deepen Bridgeheads

These armies deepened their bridgeheads over the river to five miles but had not yet begun the assault on Hannover. [The British radio said the allies were less than two miles from Hannover.]

One of the British flying columns, some of which traveled 60 miles in 24 hours since breaking out on to the north German plain thru mountain passes, turned up abruptly in Diepholz, less than 35 miles from the big German river port of Bremen.

Hamm, Germany's biggest railway center, fell to the United States 9th army, which, with the 1st army, began a broad scale attack on 125,000 or more Germans trapped in the Ruhr.

Wuerzburg, 55 miles northwest of Nuernberg, was captured by the United States 7th army which had one column within 39 miles of the Nazi shrine city and had hurdled a bend in the Main river in the southeastward push. Wuerzburg had a normal population of 108,000.

Canadian Columns Gain

The Canadian 1st army sent columns to within 35 miles of the North sea and into the center of Zutphen, barring the last 20 miles to the Zuider Zee, in twin strokes designed to trap the enemy in Holland.

The 9th army made several new crossings of the Weser river. Its 2d and 5th armored and 30th infantry divisions, which crossed Thursday, were at least five miles beyond the stream.

Street fighting still raged in the Pied Piper city of Hamelin, between the crossing sites. The new crossings of the Weser were made by infantry units near captured Minden.

The 9th and 1st armies also

NAZI PRISONERS SCOFF AT TALES OF 'CODDLING'

(This is the second in a series of articles by a Tribune reporter who recently visited five large German prisoner of war camps in this country.)

BY CARL WIEGMAN
[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

German prisoners of war in this country, who are permitted to read American newspapers, laugh and sometimes sneer when they read stories alleging that they are being "coddled." They don't agree that they are being "coddled" and are puzzled by a country that permits such criticism of its army.

This explanation of the prisoners' attitude was given by American officers at five camps. They emphasized that our treatment of prisoners has been guided by the Geneva convention, and that any violation of that treaty might bring retaliation against the thousands of American prisoners of war held by Germany.

A Question of Yank Safety

"We want to bring our men home safe and well," said one camp commander. "The war department has obtained much evidence that our treatment of German prisoners has had a direct effect in getting better treatment for American prisoners. We also think our scrupulous adherence to the treaty has had an effect on Japan."

[This estimate of the Germans' treatment of American prisoners was made before news was received of the shocking conditions in the camp at Bad Orb, Germany, recently taken by the American 7th army.]

Camp commanders said most of the "coddling" charges, when investigated, proved to be based on extraordinary incidents. One such case involved a party of prisoners trained in logging operations at Camp Shelby, Miss., who were sent to work in New England after a storm had felled many trees there.

Dining Car Incident

The party was in charge of an American sergeant who had typewritten instructions on everything to do on the trip. One order was that he should get box lunches in the dining car and take them to the prisoners. After several meals, the overworked dining car steward complained: "This is a lot of unnecessary trouble fixing box lunches. Bring the prisoners here. We'll feed them after everybody else has eaten."

The sergeant allowed himself to be convinced, and took the prisoners to the dining car. The incident was widely publicized, especially by a gossip columnist, who ignored the army's explanation.

Prison camp commanders said the greatest danger of "coddling" comes from permitting prisoners to work for civilians under private contracts with the army. When the prisoners do good work for a farmer, he is likely to buy them

3 German Boys of 12 Caught as Spies

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

RECKLINGHAUSEN, Germany, April 6—Three German boys, aged 12, sent across the Rhine-Herne canal by a brown shirt Nazi captain to spy on the Americans, identify units by shoulder patches and count tanks, were picked up this morning, crying and crouching in a shell hole, by three soldiers including Pvt. Owen Bosicher, Middletons, Ind.

"I could not believe they were 12 they were so small and skinny and puny," said Bosicher. "I thought they were about 9. They ate candy, paper and all, and said they had been living on potatoes and salt for the last week.

"When we found they had crossed the canal, climbing the ruins of a busted bridge, we had to take them to a prisoner of war cage because they had no place to go and were shivering in the cold rain."

Lt. Efraim Ackerman, Brooklyn, N. Y., told this story:

"All three children had lost one or both parents during air raids and had been sent to the store to get potatoes when a Brown Shirt officer told them that, as Hitler Jungfolk, they must serve the fuehrer and cross the river to get information about the American forces. They told him they were scared, but he pulled a pistol and threatened to shoot them, so they crossed on a wrecked bridge.

"They said that SS [elite guard] men shot civilians hanging white flags on their houses, thereby hoping to escape American artillery fire, and shot people who grabbed food when American shells blasted a railway train loaded with army supplies. I found the children were not indoctrinated with Hitlerism. In fact they said they wanted to pilot Liberators and machine gun all the Nazis. Except for being undersized, they were exactly like Brooklyn kids."

SHIPS DAMAGED IN FIRST ENEMY ATTACK BY AIR

Marines Gain Three Miles on Island

GUAM, April 7 [Saturday]—(AP)—Japanese planes belatedly attacked the American invasion fleet in the Ryukyus in force for the first time yesterday, and by late afternoon an incomplete count showed 150 of the attackers shot down. There was every indication the raid was continuing.

A fleet bulletin today said some United States ships received minor damage but "all remained fully operational." An invasion armada of 1,400 ships was involved in the Okinawa Island invasion last Sunday.

Hellcat and Corsair fighters from two fast carrier task groups, commanded by Rear Admirals Frederick C. Sherman and J. J. Clark, accounted for the enemy planes, said Adm. Nimitz.

Japs Lose 1,313 Planes

The enemy air force already had lost 1,313 planes destroyed or damaged by American naval flyers since the start of the Okinawa operations March 17.

Vice Adm. Mitscher, commander of task force 58, reported to the navy in Washington his flyers destroyed or damaged 954 enemy planes in the air or on the ground, and supporting forces accounted for 359 more.

Mitscher also said 244 enemy surface ships have been destroyed since his flyers hit southern Japan March 17 and then moved into the Ryukyus for the Okinawa invasion.

In the Okinawa ground fighting, marines on the north end of the American line scored advances of nearly three miles, still finding only "small scattered groups of the enemy," while infantry men pressing toward the capital city of Naha at the south fought deeper into fixed defense positions, Adm. Nimitz announced.

Clear Bay of Mines

Nimitz reported 539 Japanese were killed and 168 captured in seizing the Kerama Islands off the southwest coast of Okinawa prior to the main invasion.

Tokyo radio said American mine sweepers were cleaning up Nakagusuku bay, off the Okinawa southeast coast, with the protection of a task force of 30 warships, including 10 battleships and cruisers.

MUSTANGS RAID TOKYO

GUAM, April 7 [Saturday]—(AP)—A large force of Super Fortresses, aided for the first time by long range Mustang fighter planes from Iwo Island, raided Tokyo and Nagoya today.

The B-29s as usual flew from their bases in the Marianas Islands and were joined by the Mustangs near Iwo, the halfway point on the 1,500 mile run to the enemy capital.

Presumably about 150 bombers took part in the raid. Tokyo said there were about 100 B-29s and about 40 Mustangs. The enemy radio added that the Mustangs bombed and strafed the western part of the Tokyo-Yokohama area, while the Super Forts hit military objectives.

Japs Damage British Fleet.

Major units of the British Pacific fleet, including possibly the battleship H. M. S. King George V., were damaged slightly by a concerted attack on Japanese aircraft as the British force struck the Sakishima Islands March 31 thru April 2.

Five enemy aircraft made a concerted attack on the King George, a British naval observer, just returned from the battle, related today after Adm. Nimitz reported in a press release that "some major units" of the British force were damaged slightly. The King George is a 35,000 ton battleship. The British force also includes the aircraft carrier Illustrious.

That particular group of planes was driven off, the British spokesman said as he related his eyewitness account. British fighters and ships' anti-aircraft gunners destroyed 22 enemy planes and damaged nine more in the three day engagement.

BRITISH COLUMN RACES 60 MILES TOWARD BREMEN

Nazi Weser Line Broken; Yanks Seize Hamm

turned to the cleanup of the big Ruhr pocket. The 1st army went over to the attack on a 70 mile front on the south side of the pocket, and the 9th marched unopposed thru the debris strewn streets of Hamm, on the north side. The 83d division seized Hamm.

Farther west the 9th army was three miles from the Ruhr city of Dortmund.

On the bottom side of the pocket, the 1st army forced another crossing of the Sieg river, making the third bridgehead across the stream, and forged ahead four miles in the Siegen area.

Refreshed by five days of rest, Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army also surged eastward, joining the 9th and the British 2d in the assault on the Weser river line, and reaching it at Muenden, 45 miles southeast of the 9th army crossings.

Race 22 Miles

Armored spearheads raced 22 miles east of Paderborn— where the 1st army had outflanked the Ruhr—to near Bruchhausen.

Farther south infantry and tanks smashed eight miles thru elite SS troops and bazooka firing civilians to within half a mile of the river north of Muenden.

The Americans struck thru the Hessian gap, historic military gateway to the east along which Napoleon marched. They were clearing out Muenden, near the eastern exit of the gap, engaging fiercely resisting German infantry backed by heavy self-propelled guns. The gap is 10 miles long and only 200 feet wide in some places, and is bordered by high, steep hills.

Nazi Report Unconfirmed

There was nothing from the front to confirm the German report that the 3d army had reached Eisleben. A field dispatch reported a five mile advance by the 6th armored division, a six mile advance by the 11th armored, and a four mile gain by the 4th armored.

These gains put the 4th 18 miles southwest of Weimar, birthplace of the Post-World War I. German republic, the 6th armored 10 miles east of Muehlhausen, and the 11th armored 23 miles southeast of Gotha, where it was 58 miles from the Czech border.

On the south flank, the 11th armored division cleared by-passed Meiningen, 28 miles southwest of Gotha. Prisoners said the town had been defended by 800 Hungarian and panzer troops.

Gen. Crerar's Canadian 1st army provided one of the big gains of the day on the fog-shrouded, canal-cut flats of Holland. The 4th armored division, supported by the 12th Manitoba Dragoons, zig-zagged 25 miles north from Almelo along the diked highways and captured the road and railway center of Coevorden.

Seal Off Nazi Armies

Thus they virtually sealed the fate of Field Marshal Blaskowitz's German army group in western Holland, for the only good railway out to the reich was 12 miles to the west.

The Germans may try to pull out by boat but headquarters said there was no indication a big evacuation had begun. With the enemy standing firm, the cleanup of the big ports of Rotterdam and Amsterdam will be a long and difficult process.

Without confirmation, the allied controled Dutch radio said Canadian patrols had crossed the Neder Rhine and entered unopposed the bastion of Arnhem, where a British attempt to blitz Holland by a big air borne operation came to grief last year.

These forces were cutting across the rear lines of enemy troops who far to the southwest were making the only firm German stand on the entire north German plain—between Rheine and Ibbenbueren. Ibbenbueren finally was captured.

Lt. Gen. Patch's 7th army, in concert with the French 1st army, ground out new gains up to nine miles on a curving 150 mile front in southern Germany.

The French coming up on the south pushed into Stein, 20 miles east of Karlsruhe while other French forces drove five miles south of Karlsruhe along the western fringes of the Black forest.

21 NAZI SHIPS SUNK IN RAIDS ON 3 BIG PORTS

LONDON, April 6 (AP)—At least 21 German warships and merchant vessels, including a cruiser and eight submarines, were sunk and many others were damaged in the recent British air force and American air attacks on Bremen, Hamburg, and Wilhelmshaven, United States strategic air force headquarters announced today.

The light cruiser Koeln was listed as sunk in Wilhelmshaven harbor. Seven submarines, including one of 1,200 tons, were sunk at Bremen. One 740 ton U-boat was sunk in the raids on Hamburg, the bulletin said.

The raids were made by fleets of as many as 1,400 heavy bombers. Reconnaissance photographs showed widespread damage to submarine building yards and naval repair facilities at the three ports.

1,500 PLANES RIP TRAFFIC HUBS IN LEIPZIG AREA

LONDON, April 6 (AP)—More than 1,250 United States 8th air force planes attacked rail traffic centers today at Leipzig, Halle and Gera as hundreds of other allied craft smashed at targets ahead of American spearheads in southern Germany.

The attack on the three Leipzig area railroad yards, the most important communications centers between the Americans near Erfurt and the Red army on the Neisse river, was made thru clouds by 650 flying Fortresses and Liberators and more than 600 fighters, with no air opposition and little flak.

American 9th air force fighter bombers pounded road and rail traffic near Nordhausen, an airdrome near Erfurt, and rail yards at Gottingen.

REPORT CZECHS LEANING TO REDS IN NEW REGIME

LONDON, April 7 [Saturday]—(AP)—The Moscow radio said today President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia had named a new government headed by Premier Zdenek Firlinger, former Czechoslovak ambassador to Russia. Benes returned to Czechoslovakia from Moscow Tuesday.

Jan Masaryk, son of Thomas Masaryk, founder of the Czechoslovak republic, was retained as foreign minister in the new cabinet. Vyacheslav Nozek was named minister of internal affairs. The new setup was interpreted as a gesture of friendliness to Russia.

'MUST BE TRUE,' SAYS MacARTHUR OF BIGGER POST

MANILA, April 6 (AP)—An Associated Press dispatch to newspapers in Manila today gave Gen. MacArthur the first word that he had been chosen to command all ground operations against the Japanese. Col. Lloyd Lehrbas, aide to the general, carried the dispatch to MacArthur's office and emerged beaming. He reported:

"The general said if the Associated Press says so it must be true."

Adm. Horthy of Hungary Dead, Paris Radio Says

LONDON, April 7 [Saturday]—The Paris radio, quoting reports from Ankara, said today that Adm. Nicholas Horthy, former Hungarian regent, had succumbed to a heart attack at a castle "somewhere in Germany."

NAZI OFFICER'S HOUSE OF CARDS ON RHINE FALLS

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 70TH INFANTRY DIVISION, Germany, April 6—"Until two weeks ago I sincerely felt that Germany could still win the war," said the captain, taken prisoner from the enemy's once top flight 212th infantry division. "But now I am equally convinced that the war will be over within 30 days. I don't know how or when the end will come, but Germany is beaten."

The captain, whose name cannot be used, is a slim, erect man, born to wealth, and with a good command of English. He had gone thru the routine processing and his captors were eager to hear more of his story, as it was evident he felt differently from the other wehrmacht officers, who have been scornful toward the Americans.

Pulled Out of Russia

The captain had commanded an engineer battalion with the 212th, which had participated in some notable German triumphs in France and Russia early in the war. It was pulled out of Russia last November to join in Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's Ardennes counter-offensive.

"Our west wall was impregnable," he said. "I am still convinced it was. I couldn't see how the Americans could break thru. And they wouldn't have done so if some of our units had been tenacious enough.

"Now, with American armor slashing and cutting, with your dive bombers wreaking sheer carnage upon our slow columns moving to the rear . . ." He didn't finish the sentence.

Caught by Bombers in Valley

He told, then, how the 212th was forced to fall back continually, and how it and two other German divisions were caught by strafing Thunderbolts in a narrow valley, and how only 400 men from the three divisions got to the west bank of the Rhine. And not many of those made it over the river, he added.

Concerning the fighting in eastern Europe he said: "There are no rules on the Russian front. You either do or die.

"Russian infantry attacks in three massed skirmish waves. The first wave is completely armed. The second is only partly so. The third wave goes into action without any weapons, counting on finding them on the battle field.

"In Russia we usually knew where the front was and, even tho encircled, we could fight our way out and back to our units. The American army moves too fast and the front is too fluid for that."

The captain said he was convinced Russian communism and American democracy will not be able to mix in the post-war world.

3 NAZI FLYERS TIRED OF WAR, LAND IN LISBON

MADRID, Spain, April 6 (AP)—Three German air force pilots landed at the Lisbon, Portugal, airport today after a flight from Germany in the latest model Junkers 183 bi-motor fighter-bomber and told Portuguese authorities, "We have fled because we are tired of fighting."

A German air attache and other legation officials who were hastily summoned to the airport sought to interview the pilots, two of whom wore German uniforms, but the three refused to have anything to do with them. The flyers were interned at their own request.

[Another German plane, also on a flight from Germany, was damaged when it landed at Barcelona, Spain, in a heavy fog. Those aboard were not injured and their names were not disclosed.]

NAZI OFFICERS FOUND HIDING IN HOSPITAL BEDS

WITH THE 7TH ARMY IN GERMANY, April 6 (AP)—Medical officers of the 100th division said today that in inspecting a military hospital near Heilbronn, they found a German colonel, two majors and a captain posing as patients, tho they were neither injured nor ill.

Brig. Gen. Paul Steinbach, found in a hospital at Kleinrinderfeld by a group from the 8th infantry regiment, 4th division, had an old leg injury as an excuse. He entered the hospital on March 23 after a heavy bombing. He was taken by a group including Pvt. Robert Gaedke, Flint, Mich., and Lt. Elbert George Demeyer, St. Charles, Ill. Other Yanks found two German army police were hiding out in a hotel with American armor and infantry all around.

BRITISH CITIES SAVED FROM SECRET WEAPON

New York, April 6 (AP)—Allied bombers and invasion armies thwarted a German plan to wipe out London and other English cities last spring with a secret weapon—a 120 pound rocket shell with a 40 pound warhead, the British information service said tonight.

The underground firing site, near Calais, only 90 miles from London, was subjected to "terrific and efficient bombing" and then captured after D-day, the service reported. The Germans planned to fire the shells at the rate of 10 a minute, the service said, to pin London firemen and police in shelters while flying bombs and V-2s caused the main destruction.

The agency said the reich originally ordered its scientists to develop rockets capable of hitting the United States, but shortened the range requirement after the battle of Britain. The rocket was in an advanced stage of development, the service added, when 700 R. A. F. Lancasters wiped out the enemy's research establishment in August, 1943. By D-day, however, the service said, the rockets were ready and the sites were 80 per cent complete.

FLAG LOWERED IN 1923 AGAIN FLIES OVER RHINE

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COBLENZ, Germany, April 6—The American flag, lowered on Jan. 24, 1923, at the end of the American occupation following World War I., was raised again this afternoon at Ehrenbreitstein fortress overlooking Coblenz. The ceremony, symbolic of another conquest of the Rhineland, was a military observance of Army day and was attended by Gen. Bradley, commander of the 12th army group, five lieutenant generals, seven major generals, and 10 brigadier generals.

In the yard of the stone fortress built by the Prussians in 1815 on a rock bluff that has been a watch on the Rhine since the Romans garrisoned it in 9 B. C., stood the leaders of America's advancing armies, including Generals Hodges, Simpson, Gerow, and Vandenberg. Two platoons of the 4th infantry division, the outfit which lowered the flag 22 years ago, presented it to two platoons of the 69th infantry division, the outfit which took the fort with little resistance after the fall of bomb shattered Coblenz last March 27. The flag was flown here from Washington, D. C.

Also participating in the ceremony was a platoon made up of one man from each division now engaging the Nazis, each picked for meritorious combat service.

SHELL KILLS HORSE; HUNGRY NAZIS ALMOST CATCH IT AS IT FALLS

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE 35TH DIVISION, Germany, April 6—"This afternoon I saw a German woman leading a horse near a canal when a German shell killed the animal," said Maj. Lee White, Springfield, Ill. "Almost before the horse dropped, famishing Germans appeared as if by magic and despite shellfire carved up the horse, carrying off the meat. Within 10 minutes only the head, tail, and bones were left."

A Chicagoland group was cited with the 320th regiment for gallantry in destroying Nazi machine gunners defending a mine on the Emscher canal where thousands of Germans sheltered in the shafts and tunnels.

They were Sgt. Loren McKinney, Clay City, Ill.; Staff Sgt. Glenn Metcalf, Huntington, Ind.; Sgt. Anton Stast, Milwaukee, Wis.; Sgt. Walter Hrbacek, 4419 S. Campbell av., Chicago, and Lt. Miles Ward, Ellsworth, Ill., who received a battlefield commission.

TWO TRUCK DRIVERS ROBBED

Joseph Jolivet, 1314 W. 72d st., and Sam Angstrom, 1440 E. 52d st., truck drivers for Wilson & Co., were robbed of $43.50 yesterday by a gunman who boarded Jolivet's truck at Lawndale and Ogden av., where the drivers stopped for lunch.

YANKS' SURPRISE DRIVE IN ITALY GAINS 2 MILES

ROME, Italy, April 6 (AP)—The American 5th army, outflanking 3,000 foot Monte Folgorito, has gained nearly two miles since yesterday in a surprise attack southeast of Massa, allied headquarters announced today. The action took place on heights dominating the Ligurian costal highway in western Italy.

An accompanying push from Stretola, two miles from the sea, made gains but collided later with a German counter-thrust from Porta, a mile beyond.

There was no official indication as to whether the small scale American attack might develop into a major action such as Gen. Clark, 15th army group commander, recently said could be expected "sooner or later."

United States 15th air force heavy bombers for the second consecutive day attacked the Verona railroad yards, which they reported crowded with military traffic, as well as the Verona-Parona railroad bridge on the Brenner pass line.

REPORT SPLITTING UP OF GERMAN ARMY FOR GUERRILLA WAR

LONDON, April 6 (AP)—The Germans were reported today to be splitting up the wehrmacht into practically autonomous army groups under SS [elite guard] control for last ditch resistance and guerrilla warfare.

The scheme is called "decentralized realstance," according to Swiss reports which said it was adopted at a recent emergency military conference at Adolf Hitler's headquarters.

These reports followed Gen. Eisenhower's statement that guerrilla warfare could be expected in Germany. The wehrmacht reshuffling was reported as the official German radio announced that full equality has been established between the German army and the SS by a joint order of SS Leader Heinrich Himmler and Field Marshal Keitel.

VIENNA MID-CITY FOUR MILES OFF AS REDS PUSH ON

Four Suburbs Captured; Siege Arc Tightened

LONDON, April 7 [Saturday]—(AP)—Russian troops captured four suburbs of Vienna on the city line yesterday, cleared the south bank of the Danube east of the capital in a 10 mile advance and reached the Morava river barrier protecting Vienna's northeastern approaches on a 37 mile front.

Intensifying the battle of tanks and infantry men raging on a 98 mile siege arc around the capital, the Russians reached or approached the southern and southeastern limits of the city on a five mile front and battered thru suburbs to within four miles of St. Stephan's church in midcity.

Report Fighting in City

Just before midnight last night, the Vienna radio reported that street fighting had broken out in the city proper and that Russian tommy gunners had penetrated the railroad defense line along the municipal boundary. The roar of guns was heard in the background and the broadcast asserted that Vienna had been under shell fire "for several hours."

Report Sarajevo's Capture

The Free Yugoslav radio also announced that units of the Yugoslav army of national liberation had captured Sarajevo, Bosnian capital which was the scene of the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria which touched off the first World war.

On the north, the Russians were mopping up on the Vistula delta east of Danzig.

Soviet mopping-up troops were reported by the Germans to have opened a large scale attack against the East Prussian capital of Koenigsberg.

German broadcasts asserted that Red army efforts to break deeper into the streets of the Lower Silesian capital of Breslau had been frustrated after a few minor penetrations.

FIND BODIES OF WAR PRISONERS SLAIN BY NAZIS

BY ROBERT CROMIE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE UNITED STATES 4TH ARMORED DIVISION, Ohrdruf, Germany, April 6—Thirty-one partly clothed bodies lie huddled grotesquely together where SS [elite] guards killed them because they were too ill to be moved. In a little wooden shed 20 or so other naked things that once were men are stacked like logs. Some have horribly bruised backs or angry scabs on their shaved heads. The whole unbelievable pile is sprinkled with lime.

The bodies found near Ohrdruf are those of Russians, Czechs, Poles, Frenchmen, and German Jews. One, however, a blond youngster with a little hole in his neck, was an American flyer or paratrooper. At least that is what a handful of fellow prisoners, who managed to escape, said he told them.

When the SS guards became uneasy April 3, marched away those who could walk, put other on trucks and shot those too ill to travel, they took along an estimated 3,000 prisoners. According to those who hid under beds or slipped into the woods until the grim caravan had gone, the guards left behind about 2,000 others buried in a huge pit a mile or so from the camp.

Berlin to Cut Off Gas, Reduce Light Monday

LONDON, April 6 (AP)—The gas supply to all Berlin homes is to be cut off and electricity is to be drastically reduced because of a shortage of coal, a German radio announcement said today. "Beginning next Monday, transport will be refused to all Berliners who have to travel less than two miles," the announcement added. "They will have to go by foot."

Suzuki, new premier of Japan, roomed together as students at Eastman National Business college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Davis, a mechanical engineer with offices at 122 S. Michigan av., says he remembers Suzuki as a "kindly and democratic" youth who frequently expressed the wish that he had been born in America. He said he would not be surprised if the new premier were to put out peace feelers.

ATLANTIC ROUTE MAY BENEFIT BY JAP-RED BREAK

Seattle, Wash., April 6 (AP)—The Seattle Times said today that shipping sources interpret Russia's denunciation of the Japanese neutrality pact to mean that heavy lend-lease cargoes henceforth will move from the Atlantic seaboard to Russia by way of the Mediterranean and Black seas, rather than across the Pacific to Siberia.

The paper quoted shipping men as estimating that 90 per cent of all Russian lend-lease cargoes have been moving from the Pacific coast.

At Portland, however, a war shipping administration official indicated that Russia's action would not cut the flow of soviet shipments from that port.

"I do not expect it to have much effect on this port one way or another," said George Powell, assistant WSA Pacific coast director.

MEDALS GIVEN CHAPLAIN AND 3 FIGHTING YANKS

Brig. Gen. Carroll, commanding at Vaughan General hospital, yesterday awarded medals to three fighting men and an army chaplain, patients at the hospital, for heroism on battle fronts.

Capt. John E. Ernst, St. Louis, Mo., a Catholic chaplain, was awarded the silver star; Staff Sgt. Seymour Katzer, Detroit, Mich., and Pvt. Victor Rossi, Rockford, were awarded bronze stars. A Chicagoan, Sgt. Harold V. Gramm, 1419 Garfield blvd., received an oak leaf cluster for his Purple Heart medal.

Tokens of recognition for their services also were presented to 158 civilian employes of the hospital.

CENSORS BLOCK U. S. OPINION ON RED-JAP ACTION

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

All nations were free yesterday to tell the world how they reacted to the Russian-Japanese situation—except the United States.

The office of censorship blocked transmission from this country of congressional and editorial comment on Russia's denunciation of her neutrality treaty with Japan.

Such stories were allowed to be sent freely from other countries, were received here without change, and were published and broadcast widely within this country.

American censors applied the ban on outgoing news under a cautionary memorandum issued Thursday by Byron Price, director of the office of censorship. This memo cautioned against publication or broadcast of speculation "regarding the probable intentions of soviet Russia toward Japan."

Reverse Ruling

Censors in New York deleted parts of some stories the Associated Press had filed for use abroad in its world service. They suppressed but later let go thru two stories. One of these dealt with the memorandum itself—which Price had issued for publication if desired. The other contained editorial comment by American newspapers on the Russian-Japanese situation.

Tho these two stories were finally passed, it was made clear that the "speculative embargo" had not been lifted. This fact left the United States in the position of not being able to send abroad views which had been expressed or published in the United States, altho no such embargo was applied anywhere else, so far as could be learned.

An Associated Press story from Washington by John Hightower reached Latin-American newspapers minus some portions which referred to congressional speculation that the Russian action was a forerunner to hostilities against Japan.

No Ban for British

In London it was said at the censorship office that no embargo on speculation had been issued for the British press. An official asserted he had no knowledge of any intention to issue such a directive. "I can't see why," he said.

Nor was there any such directive in Moscow or Chungking.

Price's memo of Thursday gave as an example of things to be guarded against:

"Published or broadcast speculation or statements regarding the probable intentions of soviet Russia toward Japan, however erroneous they might prove to be, could possibly lead to a Japanese attack on Russia. Whether such a speculation or prediction were true or false, the military interests of the United States would be damaged and the war's sacrifice of American life might be prolonged."

Receives Protests

Price said yesterday his office has received a considerable number of inquiries and "a few protests" against his memorandum. He said:

"The language seems quite plain. It contains no request that any one refrain from discussing the Russian developments. It does point out the dangers and asks that editors and broadcasters weigh the consequences and consult censorship. I believe most editors and broadcasters will be thankful for having their attention directed to the importance and dangers of the situation."

Price was asked whether his memorandum also tightened the rules governing censorship of news filed for export from the United States. He replied:

"We're going to be pretty careful what we permit to go out."

In New York City, Sidney Walton, news director of radio station WHN, said in a broadcast last night that the voluntary censorship imposed on newspapers and broadcasters about possible war between Russian and Japan had failed of its purpose.

Says Its Basis Is Truth

Referring to Price's statement that such speculation could possibly lead to a Japanese attack on Russia, Walton said:

"For the first time voluntary censorship has failed, simply because its basis is truth, and since I can find no one to demonstrate that a Japanese attack on Russia at this time would actually damage our military interests, I cannot believe that to be the truth.

"There is not any real danger of damage to American military interests or American lives in unofficial speculation on potential military developments in the far east."

Walton added that "meanwhile the published and broadcast statements of congressmen, over whom there is no censorship control, have made the whole ruling ridiculous."

TRIP TO ARRANGE SURRENDER TOLD BY CHICAGOAN

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 16TH CORPS, Germany, April 6—Col. John Wheeler, Chicago, a Burlington railroad executive, today said that two engineers from a pontoon company accompanied 2d Lt. Christopher Gooch Jr., Nashville, Tenn., into Duisburg in a fruitless attempt to persuade the Nazis to surrender Tuesday. One of the engineers was Pvt. John Cundy, Cedar Falls, Ia.

"The engineers went unarmed in a guarded boat under a flag of truce while Gooch proceeded with the palaver," said Wheeler. "Dozens of German soldiers crowded around the storm boat, asking the engineers about America and swearing they would not fight any longer for Hitler. Several soldiers tried to enter the boat to return with Gooch and his party, but the engineers refused them permission because it would have violated the truce terms."

MOSCOW'S SCRAPPING OF PACT WITH JAPAN PUT BEFORE HIROHITO

San Francisco, Cal., April 6 (AP)—The troubled state of Japan's foreign affairs was presented personally to Emperor Hirohito today, Tokyo reported after insisting Russia is bound to maintain neutrality for another year despite soviet denunciation of its nonaggression pact with Nippon.

Tokyo said in a broadcast that the emperor received Mamoru Shigemitsu, holding over as foreign minister until newly named Premier Suzuki can form his cabinet.

Domei news agency quoted "foreign office circles" as saying "the Japanese government intends to continue its efforts for the maintenance of neutrality with the soviet union."

SUZUKI STRIKES SNAGS FORMING HIS NEW CABINET

San Francisco, Cal., April 6 (AP)—Premier-Designate Kantaro Suzuki struggled today to form a new Japanese cabinet and was reported by the Tokyo radio as making progress.

Indicative of the difficulties to be met in welding a goverment to succeed that of the Koiso regime which toppled yesterday was the Tokyo statement that some ministers might hold more than one portfolio.

"Indications are that all ministerial posts will not be filled," said a broadcast, "and that in certain cases the services of the present cabinet member will be asked."

One broadcaster said: "The people of Japan are in a bad state, but surely they will rise to the cause with the new cabinet."

Report Tojo Gets Post

LONDON, April 7 [Saturday] (AP)—The German agency DNB, quoting the Singapore radio, said today Premier Kantaro Suzuki had formed a new Japanese cabinet which included Gen. Hideki Tojo, premier at the time of Pearl Harbor.

This account said Suzuki, who often had stood against army and navy extremists, had selected a cabinet studded with former premiers.

Konoye Gets Post

The lineup, none of whom was a member of the cabinet of former Premier Koiso, included:

Prince Fumitaka Konoye, premier just before Tojo.

Adm. Keisuke Okada, premier at the time of the army revolt in 1936, in which he was reported assassinated by the extremists who found him too conservative.

Gen. Koki Hirota, former premier and foreign minister at the time the Japanese began their war on China.

Gen. Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, long an advocate of a strong and military Japan.

Gen. Baron Waratsuhe and Marquiss Hiro, the latter former lord privy seal.

[The office of war information said it might have been a garbled report, since there was nothing on the air waves from Tokyo in the way of substantiation. It was possible DNB might have misinterpreted a previous Japanese announcement that the former premiers had met Thursday after Koiso resigned.]

First Enlisted Fleet Correspondent Killed

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—The navy announced today the death in action of the first fleet enlisted correspondent. Donald Walter Forsyth, yeoman 1/c, was killed aboard his ship at sea March 19. His next of kin is his brother, Eugene S. Forsyth, Pensacola, Fla. Enlisted correspondents are assigned aboard ships of the fleet to write stories about navy men for hometown newspapers, to assist civilian war correspondents, and to prepare historical narratives of their vessel's part in the war.

YANK WITNESS SAYS TITO'S MEN BLOCKED ALLIES

Excuses Interference with 2 Missions

BY CLAY GOWRAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, April 6—There have been rumors and denials that the guerrilla fighters of Marshal Tito's national liberation army on occasion have prevented allied forces from carrying out operations in Yugoslavia as ordered by allied commanders.

Two examples of such interference are vouched for by an American soldier who witnessed them. His name cannot be revealed for military reasons. He said there were mitigating circumstances in each instance.

One Yank Group Halted

The first interference took place last July when Tito Partisans prevented British Commandos who landed on the Yugoslav coast between Split and Dubrovnik from carrying out reconnaissance against German positions around Dubrovnik. A month later six Americans who parachuted into the Partisan held area behind German lines in Yugoslavia were stopped from making similar reconnaissance.

"In each instance the Partisans had no information that the English and Americans were coming in," the soldier said. "Their leaders apparently suspected we were Germans in disguise and demanded credentials showing the raids had been authorized by high Partisan headquarters. We had no such papers and so they stopped us."

Tito's Soldiers Praised

The soldier praised the fighting ability of the Partisans, with whom he served in several battles. Here is his story:

"I was with British Commandos who hit the beach between Split and Dubrovnik one midnight last July. We wanted to feel out the strength of the Germans around Dubrovnik in preparation for a raid. As soon as we landed, the Partisans met us on the beaches. They were surprised to see us and insisted on taking the Britons' guns. Then their commander and ours had a long argument.

"The Partisan leader said he had not been informed the raid would take place and wanted to know if we had papers permitting us to land. We weren't carrying any papers. Finally it got so late and our time schedule had been so upset that we went back to the boats and left. The Partisans returned the Britons' arms.

Chutist's 'Mission Blocked'

"The second time I saw something of this sort happen was in August, when five other Americans and I parachuted into a Partisan held area behind the German lines in central Yugoslavia. We were going to scout German positions, but again the Partisans met us.

"Their leader wanted to know what we were doing, but our officer told him as little as possible. If the officer had said we were going to feel out the enemy's positions the Partisan would have said it wasn't necessary, that we could get all the information from Partisan headquarters.

"Again the guerrillas refused to let us carry out our job because we had no papers. Finally we made our way out and back to our base without the information we had gone in for."

BRITISH PUBLIC FORCED TO 'MAKE DO AND MEND!'

BY E. R. NODERER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, April 6—You can drive an Englishman to austerity clothing but you can't make him wear it.

The government's campaign to save labor and materials by forcing tailors to eliminate trouser cuffs, buttons on sleeves, and otherwise streamline suits was abandoned a year ago when the British turned up their noses at these war time garments and simply refused to buy them.

This, however, was one of the few victories of the public over the burocrats and was largely counterbalanced by the widespread manufacture of "utility" consumer goods of all types. Utility goods are simplified, standardized designs often of inferior quality. In addition to 75 per cent of all textile production, they include 100 per cent of all furniture and pencils, and a high percentage of such articles as shoes, handkerchiefs, bedding, and gloves.

Restricted in Design

Another group of articles, while not strictly utility, has been greatly simplified and restricted in design. It includes pottery and glassware, hardware, jewelry, umbrellas, perambulators, bicycles, radios, and fountain pens.

The advantage in buying utility goods is that prices are controled and are not subject to the 100 per cent purchase tax which applies to such items as silk dresses, leather bags, jewelry, cut glass, and fur coats. The disadvantage is that utility clothing takes the same number of coupons as nonutility and usually is of poorer quality.

The board of trade "make do and mend" slogan has become a grim reality for the British, who are allowed 48 clothes coupons annually. Twenty-four become valid each six months but since a man's suit requires 26, it is necessary to cut into the second six months' ration to make up the necessary quota.

Forty-two Coupons for Three Items

With a pair of shoes taking nine coupons and a shirt seven, three items use up 42 of the coupon quota. Undershirts and shorts require four each and woolen socks, two, a necktie, one, and on overcoat, 18. This ration obliges men to make their suits and overcoats last several years with most of the coupons required for accessories.

Despite the fact that a man's utility suit costs only $16 to $20, many men prefer to buy nonutility suits at $40 to $60. Both take the same number of precious coupons and the more expensive ones last longer.

The situation is much the same for women, who give 11 coupons for a woolen dress, six for a slip, two for panties, three for full fashioned hose, three for a corset, seven for shoes, two for gloves, and 18 for a coat. These items total 52 coupons, four more than the annual allotment.

Necessary for Other Items

In addition, personal clothing coupons are required for bed linen, towels, dish clothes, and other domestic articles, a feature of rationing that has raised bitter complaints from housewives. Since February, 1942, only utility furniture has been manufactured. It is provided in three designs each for living and bedrooms with veneered hardwood substituted for plywood, and the springing reduced to a minimum. This furniture generally is considered very unsatisfactory and may be bought on permits only by bombed out families, newlyweds, or families having, or expecting, children.

"Boomerang" Site Taken

WITH THE CANADIANS NEAR HOLTEN, April 6 (AP).—The Canadian infantry captured a V-weapon launching site in northeast Holland today. Civilians termed the projectiles "boomerang bombs" because so many did damage to the Nazi effort and personnel.

The site, located on the outskirts of Laren, was the same type as that used in France to hurl robot bombs against England—a long concrete ramp and compressed air propelling tracks.

Civilians said that at least 70 per cent of the bombs launched fell near the ramp.

Germans Have New Medal and 32 Letter Word for It

YANKS POUR OIL INTO JAP CAVES AND SET IT AFIRE

Burn Troops Alive in Pits on Caballo

MANILA, April 7 [Saturday] (AP)—American troops used burning oil against one center of Japanese resistance today as new advances were made in various Philippine sectors.

The oil was poured—in a modern adaptation of the medieval castle defense technique—on the heads of Japanese holding out in pits and caves on Caballo Island.

Then, as the inflammable liquid seeped thru cliff crevices of the small, rocky neighbor of Corregidor, American tracer bullets and phosphorous shells set it afire.

Pits Built by Yanks

Japanese resistance was thus snuffed out in pit after pit as the novel method, devised to aid the 38th division's 12 day battle to clear the island, was inaugurated yesterday. Engineers said it would be used until remaining Japanese surrendered or are wiped out.

The pits, built by American troops before the war, are 30 feet square and 20 deep, with a 12 foot thick concrete wall. Steel doors block tunnel entrances. Americans tried desperately for nine days to root out the Japanese.

Technical experts sought a solution. Capt. Emory L. Williams of Tulsa, Okla., suggested oil might work.

Pump Oil into Pits

A huge pump was rigged with 1,000 feet of semi-flexible pipe. It was run up Caballo's rocky face while infantrymen fired to keep the Japanese under cover. The pump spewed a mixture of oil and gasoline into a pit. It gushed out thru a drain in the side of the cliff.

Hop 20 Miles, Take Town

The 11th air borne division has advanced 20 miles in small planes to seize Lucena, capital of Tayabas province, Luzon, and its air fields, while the 158th regimental combat team, with guerrilla aid, cleared the province of Sorsogon, south of Manila, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

In northern Luzon guerrillas captured Bangued, capital of Abra province, and were rapidly clearing the Japanese from the entire sector.

On Negros the 40th division captured the Silay airdrome and pushed patrols as far north as the Alicante air field. Considerable Japanese war equipment was seized. Several enemy infiltration attempts were repulsed on Cebu.

Liberators spanned the China sea to bomb the vital port of Hong Kong for the third straight day Thursday, setting off tremendous water front fires and wrecking three merchant ships with direct hits. They dropped 164 tons of bombs, bringing the three day total to 458 tons.

STETTINIUS SAYS YALTA PACT ON POLAND STANDS

New York, April 6 (AP)—State Secretary Stettinius said today that "nothing has happened to shake my belief that the Yalta agreement on Poland will be carried out."

The agreement provided for establishment of a new, democratic Polish government and consultations have been going on fruitlessly in Moscow for seven weeks among Britain, Russia, and the United States.

Stettinius, in a speech before the Council on Foreign Relations, chided those who express concern over the prospects of the San Francisco security conference because of this delay and because of the Russian request for three assembly votes.

Predicts "New Problems"

"If we based our course of action on that line of reasoning we would never have a conference, or a world organization," he said. "New problems of this nature will continue to arise."

He said that for two years the major allies have disagreed over Poland and that the Crimean decision is "only seven weeks old."

"The delay in carrying out the Crimea decision on Poland has been disappointing," Stettinius said, "but in this perspective it has not been long.

"It is important that this new government be established in time to make it possible for Poland to be represented at San Francisco. The United States government is doing all in its power to bring this about."

Stettinius said that the San Francisco conference "will be a decisive juncture in the history of America and of the world."

Prodigious Effort.

However, he said that it has taken three and a half years of prodigious effort to bring allied forces to the heart of Germany and close to Japan.

"We can be sure," he said, "that winning the peace is going to take a good deal longer and that it will be just as difficult and challenging a task."

Stettinius reaffirmed the basic American policy of respecting "the legitimate rights of small nations. It is basic in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals."

"The large nations, and all the united nations," he asserted, "are firmly united in the purpose and in the necessity to create a new world organized for peace." He said that "this unity of purpose and this community of national interest is paramount to all the lesser differences among us."

Stettinius took issue with the idea expressed in some quarters that establishment of the security organization before the peace is written would commit the United States in advance "to maintaining all these settlements in perpetuity whether they are good or bad."

"Just the contrary is true," he said.

AMERICAN BAR POINTS PERIL IN GLOBAL PARLEY

Would Guard Nation's Rights, Enterprise

The American Bar association will offer to the allied nations conference, called to meet in San Francisco April 25, suggestions for changes and clarifications in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals designed to protect free enterprise and safeguard national rights. Thru these the association hopes to prevent the charter of the proposed international security organization from degenerating into partly outdated provisions.

The association's plan was learned yesterday at the conclusion of the three day meeting of its board of governors in the Drake hotel.

A committee report adopted by the board stresses the dangers of the economic and social council proposed at Dumbarton Oaks.

Watch Development, Report Warns

"The American public should watch carefully the development of this phase of the new structure," the report reads. "At least at the start, the powers of any economic and social council, if such is created, should be kept purely advisory, and should not include the power to intervene in the economic or social institutions, or the ways of life, of any country."

The report suggests that primary emphasis should be placed on establishing justice, broadening the scope and authority of international law, providing sound and durable bases of representation, and devising effective means for preventing aggression, rather than on "giving sanctions for ambitious, elaborate plans for remaking the structure of free enterprise society and the industrial and social institutions of the world."

Protection of National Rights

A recommendation adopted outlines procedure by which each nation, in accordance with its own constitutional processes, can ratify the principles of international law to be formulated by an international conference.

This, it was explained, would not only protect the rights of individual nations, but would give the proposed permanent court of international justice a definite body of principles that would be the basis for its deliberations.

CHINESE UNLEASH 3 PRONGED ATTACK IN HONAN PROVINCE

CHUNGKING, China, April 6 (AP)—Chinese forces unleashed a three pronged counter-offensive against Japanese troops striking toward Shensi province, guarding the northern approaches to China's capital, the high command announced today.

The Chinese command said Chiang Kai-shek's forces pouring out of southwestern Honan annihilated a Japanese battalion and encircled a number of strongholds west of Neisiang on the Honan-Shensi highway.

The Chinese counter-offensive was launched yesterday against a double Nipponese drive deep into China's hinterland. In fighting 31 miles from the Shensi border which preceded the counter-offensive, more than 1,000 invaders were annihilated and nine enemy tanks were destroyed.

FINDS HUNGER AMID PLENTY ON OKINAWA

OKINAWA, Ryukyu Islands, April 6 (AP)—This fertile island is a paradox, said Capt. O. B. Morrison, 3d amphibious corps surgeon. Diseases every one should have are rare, but almost every native man, woman, and child Morrison has met was suffering from malnutrition.

Okinawa's soil is rich and virtually every tillable inch of it is producing abundantly. Milch goats are everywhere and natives raise many hogs. "I can see no reason why these people should go hungry," Morrison said.

The native living standard is such that the people should be easy targets for malaria, cholera, bubonic plague, and typhus. Morrison has come into contact with none of these maladies.

Col. Robb S. MacKie

Col. MacKie joined the army in 1917. In the present war he served overseas as a member of the European theater of operations staff and on his return, in 1943, served as chief of the overseas replacement branch. Since last September Col. MacKie has been in Washington.

He will live at Fort Sheridan with his wife and two children, Katherine, 11, and James D., 10.

TIME FIGHTS ON JAPS' SIDE, SAYS GEN. RICHARDSON

HONOLULU, T. H., April 6 (AP)—Speedy defeat of Japan, because time is on the side of the Nipponese, was urged today by Lt. Gen. Richardson, army commander in the Pacific ocean areas.

"Time now works for the enemy and against us," said the general in an Army day address. "The momentum of the offensive must not cease when hostilities cease in Europe. Both management and labor must realize that there can be no easing up when hostilities cease. That is the only patriotic attitude and the only decent one for any American."

Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, commanding the fleet marine force, sent an Army day message to Richardson in which he saluted army forces in the Pacific "for a year well spent, a job well done."

An official was quoted as saying the vessel was expected to pick up the supplies at the Russian port of Nakhoda" toward the latter part of this month."

TOLL OF WOUNDS IN ABDOMEN CUT 50% BY SURGERY

Vaughan Hospital Medic Tells of Strides

Skilled surgery has resulted in a 50 per cent mortality reduction from abdominal wounds in World War II. as compared with World War I., Maj. George B. Sanders, assistant chief of medical service at the Vaughan General hospital, told a clinic at the hospital yesterday.

Blood plasma and the new "miracle" drugs, penicillin and sulfa, were given secondary rating as "useful adjuncts" by Maj. Sanders.

Mortality in wounds of the colon, once 60 per cent, has been reduced to 30 per cent, it was brought out.

Use of Colostomy Told

Colostomy—the surgical procedure associated with the repair of wounds of the bowel—has proved to be one of the most effective methods of treating abdominal wounds, he continued. While colostomy was known before World War II., it was not utilized much, Maj. Sanders said, but since the war great strides have been made in its use.

The colostomy treatment, he explained, consists of making a temporary opening in the abdominal wall thru which contents of the colon are detoured temporarily to put the injured part at rest and to prevent peritonitis.

Cites Improvement Factors

Highly improved surgical skill in the army medical corps, Maj. Sanders said, is the result of two factors: 1—Adaptation of the residential [hospital] system among civilian doctors for the last 20 years, which has produced highly trained surgeons. 2—Lessons learned in World War I. as the result of careful observation, new technological advances in evacuating the wounded, well equipped and well staffed hospitals near the fronts, and intelligent use of such aids as penicillin, plasma, whole blood, and sulfa drugs.

To illustrate some of the principles which were discussed several soldier patients were presented at the clinic. One of these was a major of the medical corps, a Chicago resident, who was thrown from a jeep on the western front. The head and neck of his right hip joint were shattered and fragments were destroyed beyond repair.

This subject was discussed by Lt. Col. Thomas Horwitz, chief of the orthopedic section, who described the operation in which the fragments were removed and the ball socket action restored with a vitallium [metal cup]. The doctor, who suffered the injury five months ago, walked before the doctors with the aid of a cane and without pain.

Treat 4,000 Since August

Of the 1,900 battle casualties now enrolled in Vaughan hospital, 1,350 are on surgical treatment and 75 per cent of them are orthopedic problems, Col. Horowitz said. Over 4,000 patients have been treated in the hospital since it was opened last August.

Dr. Lester R. Dragstedt, president of the society and professor of expert surgery at Chicago university, said the hospital has a fine staff and is performing marvelous service. He, too, credited the special surgical training of young men in hospitals as residence doctors for the advancement in surgical skills.

CHICAGO NURSE OFF OKINAWA SCOOPS WORLD

ABOARD A NAVY HOSPITAL SHIP OFF OKINAWA, April 6 (AP)—Second Lt. Valerie Goodman, 1539 Fargo av., Chicago, one of 37 nurses giving American wounded the best possible care on this ship, knows a story when she sees it. Fixing the blanket of a patient, she turned and called to a reporter, "This man has a good story; let him tell it to you." The patient, a Texas sergeant, told it:

"Four of us were standing guard at night and I was taking my turn at sleep. A Jap tossed a grenade which woke me but didn't hurt any one. I jumped up, grenade in one hand and rifle in the other, and threw a grenade, but a second Jap must have thrown a grenade at the same time because it nearly blew my right hand off. I grabbed my rifle in my left hand, killed the second Jap, and then told the rest of the guys, 'Let's get the ball outa here.' They tell me my hand is O. K. but I lost one toe on my right foot."

Two Red Cross girls move among this ship's patients distributing cigarets, pocketbooks, toothbrushes, candy, and gum. "It's pretty swell, one soldier remarked.

PARIS, April 6—Twenty tons of clothing donated by the American Red Cross today was distributed to bombed out families of Rouen by the American civil affairs and French relief organizations.

Fighters Praised

The army and its millions of men and women in service on far flung battle fronts were appropriately saluted in the annual army day ceremony yesterday at Victory plaza in front of the city hall. Highlights of the program were broadcast over W-G-N.

Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, commanding general of the 6th service command, one of the chief speakers, called for "every ounce of energy and every hour of production to bring this war to an end."

Mayor Kelly sounded praise for the millions of men and women now fighting on the fronts, many of whom were in civilian life a year ago. "Never since the founding of this country," said the mayor, "have the people had greater reason for tribute and devotion to our armed forces." He said it was time for the people of Chicago to join the nation in "prayer and praise for our fighting men."

Other speakers were Rear Adm. A. S. Carpender of the 9th naval district, Col. Chester Fordney of the marine corps, and Comdr. P. G. Petterson of the coast guard. Music was provided by an army band from Fort Sheridan and a Salvation army mobile unit served donuts and coffee to members of the band and an R. O. T. C. drill unit. A Sherman tank was on exhibit.

CHICAGO WOMAN TEACHES YANKS ACTING IN ITALY

When service men in Italy want to forget the serious business of war they look up the Mask and Wig club. Next thing they know they find themselves saying "Ah," learning lines for a play, and picking up dance routines under the direction of a Chicago girl, Miss Madge Friedman, who has been overseas with the American Red Cross for 21 months.

Miss Madge Friedman

"The weather is bad and missions go on, but still these boys hitch hike all the way in to the club for rehearsals," Miss Friedman recently wrote to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Friedman, 1717 Rice st., Highland Park. The club has staged such plays as "Our Town," "Good Times," "Babes in the Woods," and "Private Lives."

As many British boys as Americans visit the club, she said. "In fact," she said, "a British boy is attempting to direct 'Front Page,' which is strictly an American play. Maybe that's one way to stimulate understanding between the two countries."

Yesterday her parents received word that Miss Friedman had been promoted to assistant program director. The announcement was made from Washington, D. C.

TRIBUNE WORKER SERVING IN NAVY AWARDED MEDAL

Lt. Thomas W. Burns Jr., 27, a Tribune classified advertising department employe on leave with the navy, has been awarded the bronze star, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Burns of 6629 Glenwood av., have been notified.

Lt. T. W. Burns Jr.

The medal was awarded Lt. Burns for meritorious achievement during the amphibious operation at Leyte, when he was in command of mine sweeping units. A citation by Adm. Kinkaid, commander of the 7th fleet, said Lt. Burns also effected the rescue of the crew of an abandoned ship without a single loss.

Lt. Burns left THE TRIBUNE to enter the navy Aug. 18, 1941, and graduated from the midshipmen's school at Abbott hall. His wife, Adelaide, and son, Thomas W. III., are residing temporarily with his parents at the Glenwood av. address.

LAST MARINE IN FAMED PHOTO ON WAY HOME

PEARL HARBOR, April 6 (AP)—Rene A. Gagnon of Manchester, N. H., is the only marine in Associated Press Photographer Joe Rosenthal's famous Mount Suribachi flag raising picture to survive the battle of Iwo Jima. He was homeward bound today to take part in a bond tour.

Gagnon, who lives with his mother, Mrs. Irene Gagnon, Manchester, said he would rather "face another operation than make a bond tour," but there is an additional reason for his wanting to go home. The other reason is a girl.

There are six men in the historic photo—five marines and one navy hospital corpsman. The navy man later lost a leg in battle.

EUROPE LEARNS FROM OWI ABOUT CULTURE IN U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—The office of war information, its psychological warfare activities slowing down with the imminent defeat of Germany, has branched out into the field of informing Europe that the United States has some culture, it was disclosed today.

Edward W. Barrett, director of OWI overseas operations, announced the agency is bent on destroying long standing and "unfortunate" impressions held by Europeans that American cultural achievements are centuries behind the nation's industrial development.

He said the necessity for psychological warfare in Europe has decreased.

It also was disclosed the OWI and the state department have teamed together on their related cultural activities on the presumption that the state department can carry on when and if congress approves legislation and funds for a world-wide cultural relations program after the war.

Barrett said he and Archibald MacLeish, the poet and an assistant secretary of state, are heads of a joint OWI-state department committee to guide the cultural information program. The committee was organized four months ago, shortly after MacLeish became connected with the state department in charge of promoting cultural relations between the United States and foreign countries.

An explanation to the question of why the United States should busy itself convincing Europe that America has culture was given by Thurman L. Barnard, executive overseas director for the OWI.

Barnard said the United States is not "understood" in Europe. He asserted the Germans have been telling Europeans that America is backward, barbaric, decadent, and is not to be included among the progressive civilized nations of the world.

"For example," Barnard asserted, "the Nazis have displayed pictures of the damaged Cologne cathedral as purported proof that Americans, having no culture of their own, are attempting to destroy the culture of Europe. The OWI is working to convince Europe we are not backward people and do have culture because this is the only hope we have of keeping Europeans from following the German line of propaganda."

In addition to these activities, the OWI also has undertaken to be an instigator and "transmission belt" for the renewal of private and organizational cultural contacts between Europe and the United States.

THE HOUSING BILLS

The state senate has adopted by unanimous vote a series of slum clearance and housing bills. They were approved with little if any change from the form in which they were introduced. This demonstrates that there are no less than 48 members of the senate whose heads are even softer than their hearts. By the exercise of a little intelligence they would have had no difficulty in separating the good from the bad in this program.

There is plenty of both. This is the plan:

The city government would raise $5,000,000 by the sale of its bonds and the state treasury would add another $5,000,000. The $10,000,000 would be used to buy a great block of slum property, thru condemnation proceedings if that proved necessary. The expectation is that about a square mile could be acquired with the money available.

The land would then be turned over to the Chicago Housing authority. This agency, being a municipal government, can issue bonds, the interest on which is exempt from federal taxation. Perhaps, in addition, a federal guarantee could be obtained for the repayment of the loan. At any rate, the housing authority and its financial advisers believe it can borrow something like $90,000,000 at low interest rates. The money would be used to clear the site and erect new, light, sanitary, airy dwellings. In all, about 15,000 units, including both houses and flats, might be obtained for the money.

The location of the project is not stated in the bills, but the mayor and the governor are both committed to the south side and it is there, undoubtedly, that all or almost all of the money will be spent, presumably in the development of one big tract.

So far, so good, or at least not so bad. There is a housing shortage thruout the city, but the gravest shortage is in the area occupied by Negroes. Congestion is appalling. Almost all the buildings are old, many of them need repair, and many others are beyond repair. They are a menace to the physical and moral health of the occupants and, in some measure, of everybody else in the community. The rents are high in relation to the accommodations offered. For all these reasons, and a lot more, we believe that the reclamation of these unsightly and unsanitary slums on the south side is eminently desirable and should be given first consideration.

What cannot be justified is the exemption of the new housing from local taxation. These dwellings are not intended for destitute people and destitute people will not be accepted as tenants. The proponents of the plan are talking of rents at about $7 a room a month. The rate might have to be increased to $10 or more if the occupants, in their rent, paid their fair share of taxes for the support of the police and fire departments, the schools, the parks, etc., as every other tenant and house owner does everywhere else in the city.

On the theory that the properties will be owned by a municipal government they are to be exempted from this taxation and, instead, are to pay a so-called service fee of perhaps a tenth as much. That will create a discrimination which cannot be defended. On what theory can his government say to one citizen earning $1,800 a year that he must pay his full share toward the schooling of his children and say to another citizen, earning precisely the same income, that he will be spared the necessity of paying anything for the education of his? It doesn't make sense. The first man lives in an old house that he provided for himself, but pays taxes; the community supplies a new house for the second man, who pays none. Who can find justice in such an arrangement?

And that isn't all of it. The selection of those who will live in the newer houses and enjoy the tax exemption that goes with them will be by politically appointed officials. If anybody were required to think up the best way to build an iron clad, air tight, copper riveted political machine on a foundation of corruption he could find nothing more serviceable than this. It is bad enough to give the politicians arbitrary control over the distribution of the new houses, but to give, in addition, the lawful right to present each tenant with something like $100 a year in tax rebates is more than an invitation to corruption; it is corruption. As surely as politics is politics it will corrupt the housing authority, as well as the tenants.

It is no answer to say that special consideration in taxes should be given to Negroes because they are the victims of many economic and social discriminations. If that is the theory, why give the benefits to some Negroes and not to all? Certainly no real friend of the Negro would favor excluding any or all of them from their responsibilities as citizens. What the Negro needs, wants, and is entitled to is full equality before the law and equal economic and educational opportunity. If he is exempted from the obligations of a citizen a foundation will have been laid for every outrageous discrimination against him. A citizen who doesn't pay his share of the school taxes has no rght to complain if the schools his children attend are below par.

The principal objection to the program would be avoided if the bills were amended to require the housing authority to pay taxes like any other landlord. The notion is prevalent that the property of municipal corporations cannot be taxed. That is not the law of Illinois. Section 3 of Article 9 of the state constitution provides:

"The property of . . . municipal corporations, both real and personal . . . may be exempted from taxation." Note the words "may be"; the proposed exemption is not mandatory. The legislature can refuse to grant it and there is ample precedent for doing so. In the case of Sanitary District v. Gibbons [293 Ill., 519] the Supreme court of the state said:

"It has been the rule in this state from its earliest history that the assessment of taxes upon public property of state, county, or municipal corporations was a mere question of policy and that the power existed to make it bear its share. . . . Whatever may be the law in other states, the language of the constitution of this state plainly implies that the property of municipal corporations is subject to taxation unless there is a law exempting it. . . ."

There is no good reason for exempting these housing projects from taxation. To do so is unfair to the rest of the community and will inevitably lead to demoralizing demands from everybody else for tax exemption. That way lies municipal bankruptcy and bigger and better slums.

ANOTHER ELEVENTH HOUR CONVERT

Russia didn't get around to denouncing its nonaggression pact with Japan until some weeks after a British fleet finally appeared in the Pacific war. Stalin discovers that the Japanese are making war on his allies three years after Pearl Harbor; after the Jap fleet has been shattered and Tokyo blitzed; after the American landings on Okinawa, for what the Japanese radio said was to be the crucial battle of the war, were expanded with virtually no opposition; and within hours after Japan starts to form a so-called "moderate" government, which it would have to have if it were to sue for peace.

Russia isn't at war with Japan. Russia has merely told the Japanese that its promise not to fight them is no longer valid. The deal, conceivably, was made at Yalta. If so, the American people should find out from Mr. Roosevelt, if they can, what the other considerations are.

Stalin is a good Russian. For anything he has done or will do against Japan, weakened tho she now is by the war which the United States has fought singlehanded for 40 months, he will exact a price comparable with the territorial gains he has compelled his allies to approve at the expense of the Baltic states, Poland, and the Balkan countries.

History furnishes an easy key to what the price will be. Russia wants Manchuria. It may want Korea, Inner Mongolia, and parts of north China as well, if not under absolute sovereignty, then in the hands of a puppet Chinese communist state. We and Britain have already obligated ourselves at Cairo to Chiang Kai-shek in regard to these territories with the flat statement "that all the territories Japan has stolen from the Chinese, such as Manchuria, Formosa, and the Pescadores, shall be restored to the republic of China."

Stalin, at that time, would not meet Chiang Kai-shek, which was the reason why the Japanese war was discussed at Cairo and not at Tehran. Russia is thus not obligated. We are.

Now that we have licked Japan, what reward did Mr. Roosevelt pledge to Stalin at Yalta for denouncing the treaty and how much of what had already been pledged to China has now been taken from her?

DUMB AND DISHONEST

American sympathy for people in distress has been responsive at all times, as long ago as the Irish famine and not so long ago in the Japanese earthquake. Mr. Hoover administered food relief after the other war and during the war in occupied Belgium and northern France. When the Russian dictatorship produced a famine by its forceful treatment of the small farmers and its persecution of the kulaks, America, altho revolted by the Red methods, sent relief. We'll not say it is an uncommon trait of generosity, merely that it has been spontaneous and reliable. It will be so now if the Big Three, Messrs. Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin, put their houses in order and remove the soreness of misunderstandings.

In the first place it is certain that the American people will soon be very tired of hearing that they do not know anything of the war and have had all the soft side of it. Worry and apprehension are the routine in millions of American homes. There are eleven million men and women in uniform and that means homes with vacancies. It's an insult to suggest that the grief which follows the publication of casualty lists or the anxiety which precedes it is on the soft side of war. We have been remote from bombed cities, battlefields, and invading armies, as remote, let it be said, as from the causes which started these calamities in motion. Something which has a too familiar ring from the other war is recurring in the declamations of this one—that our allies held the line for us while we tarried and did not enter.

When such a statement is made by the minister or representative of a foreign state we may hesitate to put him in his place because he can find so much justification for his sentiments in the utterances of foreign minded people in this country, many instances, unfortunately, being offered by Mr. Roosevelt. Our own people who say that this was our war from the beginning and that, therefore, we were two years derelict in it, cannot, as we know, be reasoned with or shamed. But ministers of other governments can at least use their common sense if not their common knowledge and not seek now to create false obligations. The European statesmen, following their precedents of centuries, chose what to fight for and what not to fight for, when to do it and when not to do it. The doctrine that we are involved instantly in their choices has become a pernicious root disease in our national growth.

MR. PEPYS IN A GALE

7th April—Came the week of the Big Wind, and I sallied out into the furious blasts wearing my blizzard buster cap, for there is nothing that irks me more than walking around with one hand clutched to a hat brim. The entire male population was staggering against the gale, looking like prisoners of war, and hats filled the turbulent air. I stopped several rollers to get in trim for the baseball season, and presented the fugitive lids to their breathless owners. They were duly grateful, but whenever one of them recognized me he would say, "Why are you wearing a cap?"

Went to the opening of "One Touch of Venus" at the Opera House, and at the intermission discovered the cigaret shortage at its worst. The large, baronial hall called the foyer was as foggy as a Sherlock Holmes story, and the customers were standing close together, burning holes in Easter clothes and blowing smoke down throats. I couldn't see or feel my way to the water fountain. Withdrew from this merry scene to avoid suffocation.

Found my colleagues in a state of excitement one day when I came to work with my cheery "Good morning" in the middle of the afternoon. They had captured and deported a mouse that had been running around in my smaller wastebasket [I have two], unable to escape because the receptacle is built like a drum. [In fact, I often use it as a drum when I seek to soothe my cares with sweet music.] Well, they accused me of harborir ; this pernicious creature, so I answered, "Haven't you heard that respect is due to the fellow who invents a better mousetrap?"

GARDENER'S LITANY

By grace of early hyacinths
That fold slim hands in prayer;
By grace of sunny daffodils
That dance away all care;
By grace of gentle violets'
Sweet faces upward thrust,
O God of hearts and gardens,
Reward the ones that trust!

By grace of zinnias marching
Heads up in August drouth;
By gallant pansy blooming
With frost's kiss on her mouth;
By aster and snapdragon
Resisting rust and blight,
O God of hearts and gardens,
Preserve the ones that fight!

By every blue delphinium
Uprooted by the storm;
By every tender rose whose heart
Has withered to the worm;
By fragile poppies shattered,
By lilies, wet-faced, kneeling,
O God of hearts and gardens,
To stricken ones bring healing!

The Best Books of Boyhood

Because of a crick in the back, I am confined to my easy chair. Tired with re-reading old favorites, eyes droop, book drops, and fancy takes over. I see a towheaded lad perched behind the news counter of a small town variety store. In one hand is a Beadle novel, while the other grips an unruly scalplock. He is potting Indians or white renegades in the superb company of Danite Dan, Diamond Dick, or some other blood purger of the Beadle sagas. But there is an ethical obstacle to overcome—this is pirated reading and the Beadle pages are uncut.

With a Barlow knife he violates a virginity as dear to the Beadle reader as the sanctity of a rare folio is to the bibliophile. Then a kindly uncle, with the admonition that a good salesman should know all his merchandise, leads the erring one's attention to the better fiction of the paperbound Seaside and Lovell libraries [pages pre-cut]. First as a boresome duty, then with increasing gusto, the lad bookworms thru the shelves from Anstey to Zangwill. Stanch friends are made there to provide pleasure in after years—Ainsworth, Dumas, Gaboriau, Ouida, Poe, Verne, and a host of other wizards in story telling.

I recall, with a decent warmth about the ears, that thru this dizzy cerebration that lad developed a smug superiority over the Beadle fraternity, and became generally obnoxious in literary snobbishness. Of course, so lofty an attitude would not permit peeping in the beloved Beadles, except when the uncle and the regular readers were not around. Chiggers.

THE SCREENS GO UP!

Time's wheel turns half around, and overnight
Drab winter's weight is lifted from our lives
As wanton verdure, in its age-old rite,
Proclaims the sun, and fainting earth revives.
Out comes the ladder, and each faithful screen,
Brushed free of cobwebs and the storeroom dust,
Mounts to its place on sleepless guard routine,
A summer sentinel in bugproof trust!
To those preoccupied in humdrum tasks
The name of "ritual" earns but a smile,
And yet beneath men's heedless, careworn masks
Our gratitude speaks softly all the while:
Another year, and opened windows bring
The winds of spring in blest awakening!

If you were sworn into federal service and on active duty, you should have received your pay and a certificate of service upon separation or shortly thereafter. ABSCESSES MAY FORM IN THE LUNGS.

SOME of us will take care of our colds. Others will not and, as a result, we encounter a sizable number of cases of influenza, pneumonia, and allied infections. We must recognize also the possibility that inflammation of the lung and its surrounding membrane [pleura] may lead to abscesses. When pus collects between two pleural layers we call the condition "empyema." If it gathers within the substance of the lung, it is termed "pulmonary abscess."

Following pneumonia, the temperature may be normal for a few days. A characteristic rise—low in the morning and high in the late afternoon—is then noted. In the circumstances, we may assume that trouble exists somewhere, perhaps within the lung itself. If, in addition, foul smelling material is coughed up, the diagnosis is practically certain. In order to locate the abscess accurately, however, a careful X-ray examination is essential.

Why do some patients develop these lesions? In the main, it is a question of resistance or the state of the health. But what constitutes normal health? The answer is that those individuals who take good care of the body, who regard it at least as worthy of attention as an automobile, are usually better able to resist disease.

Bacteria reach these organs largely thru the mouth. If the oral cavity is dirty, filled with decayed teeth, or is bathed in pus as a result of pyorrhea, so many depots of germs are placed directly at the entrance to the structures that they cannot fail to involve the delicate respiratory tissues.

Such an abscess may appear subsequent to operation on badly diseased tonsils or other surgical procedures about the mouth. In fact, about one-half of these cases arise from this cause. No surgeon would choose to remove infected tonsils. Nevertheless, to allow this tissue to remain in the body is dangerous, hence elimination is desirable. The most skilled operator is required and every precaution must be taken so that debris from the area, as well as pus from other sources, shall not be drawn into the lungs while the patient is under the anesthetic.

If a lung abscess is present, every effort must be made to build reserve with bed rest and good food. There are many drugs to choose from, which will prove beneficial and often lifesaving. The selection depends upon the offending germ. The various sulfa compounds, penicillin, or one of the arsenicals may be recommended. Occasionally, these preparations are used in combination.

The sufferer should be placed in such a position that the force of gravity will assist discharge from the contaminated region. While pus can be coughed up if the patient is in an upright position, the easiest way to bring about drainage is to elevate the foot of the bed at an angle of 45 degrees for a half hour or longer several times daily. If this is not sussessful, skilful surgery or the use of the bronchoscope may be required.

POSSIBLE

S. G. writes: Is penciilin of any value in arthritis?

REPLY

This depends entirely upon the cause. Joint symptoms resulting from wear and tear will not be helped. I understand that disappointing results have also been obtained in those cases considered to be due to infection. Certain germs respond to penicillin and, if these can be proved to be responsible for the malady, it is conceivable that benefit may possibly result.

Heaven Holds No Mysteries

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—As far as is known, no one here remembers Lincoln, but one person remembers seeing Grant. She not only remembers it, she admits it. She was 10 years old the day he paraded thru this fallen Confederate city, and altho the city had fallen long before and the Confederacy long had ceased to exist except in tragic memory, few of its citizens would even venture out of doors the day President Grant came to town. They remained behind closed shutters, in rooms crowded with the thoughts of their dead and mementoes of a lost cause, but not Miss Sally. She climbed on a fencepost to watch the parade and when Grant passed her she stuck out her tongue. Grant undoubtedly forgot this quickly, but she never has.

Miss Sally is far from well and slowly is losing the great bulk that made her rocking chair creak to punctuate her amiable, interminable conversation. It isn't often she can even get downstairs to work around her rosebushes, and when she does, she usually is confined to her bedroom for a week. When this happens, she swallows the pain and shifts to the rocker by the window and carries on from there. Whatever has happened, this year, last year, 10, 20, or 50 years ago, she can tell you of it. Whether you know the persons involved is utterly inconsequential to her as well as to you. She gally admits she talks for amazement and amusement, and the visitor gets a good bit of both.

Today it was the scandalous way people are getting divorced. They've been doing it for some time, but she can't get used to it. Each new divorce or rumor of it shocks her. She said today she didn't know but what she was glad she had never married, for if she had she probably would have at least one divorce behind her now and another on the way and she just never would be at peace with herself. This time she had a string of new ones to rattle off. Only one, a gentleman now divesting himself of his third wife, bothered her. She hasn't learned whom he intends to marry now. "Must be some one," she ruminated. "I have a cousin lives out near him who ought to know. The trouble is I haven't seen her lately.

"Why anybody'd marry him is a mystery to me," she continued after a brief spell of rocking. "This town's full of mysteries, tho. Lived here all my life and still don't understand half of it. The most mystifying thing of all was a murder that happened. . . . Years ago. You were too young to know about it, I guess. A pretty young woman, a little thing, was found dead in a wellhouse on her relative's property. There'd been a big party the night before, and a newsboy found her in the morning. Her little coat was buttoned right up to her neck, and her hands were folded on her chest, but when they opened the coat, there was two bullet holes thru her. . . . A shameful, scandalous thing, because nothing was ever done about it. Only gave it a bit of space in the paper. Called it suicide. The coroner said it wasn't, but every one else said it was, so he had to resign. Never even tried to solve it. It's still a mystery.

"Of course, I always had an idea who did it. So did everybody else, but we may have been wrong, altho I don't think so. It's a mystery to this day."

Again that determined rocking. Then, with a wide smile, "That's what worries me about dying, the thought of going to my grave with so many really interesting mysteries unsolved. I said that to a friend of mine, she's a fine artist, but she had to stop painting portraits because she makes folks look natural, and all of them were her friends. 'I can't afford to lose any more friends,' she said, so she quit painting. Well, I told her how I felt about all these unsolved mysteries surviving me, and what do you suppose she said? She said, 'You know, Miss Sally, I believe that when we get to heaven we won't be allowed to know any more about what's not our business than we're allowed to know now.' . . . I don't know. She may be right. She's a remarkably intelligent woman. But," slyly, "I'm right hopeful."

MANDATES WORK BOTH WAYS

Ackley, Ia., April 2—Permit a native Hawkeye who, as well as his state, voted against both third and fourth terms, to say in response to the president of the Chicago F. D. R. club who discussed the senate's rejection of Aubrey Williams, that he begs the question when he says that the President had a blank check mandate because he was elected. He seems to overlook the fact that the senators who proved their statesmanship and courage by emphatically rejecting Mr. Williams and what he stands for were also elected by the people. They were elected from various parts of the country, not because of any political trickery or violation of precedent, but because the people of their states wanted them, and expected them to do their duty. Aubrey Williams was never elected by the people to anything, and presumably could not be, with his views. COUNTRY LAWYER.

THE INFALLIBLE BUROCRATS.

Chicago, March 22.—In these days of meat famine, perhaps it would be of value to all of us if some services were held in memory of all those poor, innocent, little pigs that were killed, burned, or thrown in the river by the New Deal. Perhaps some of the "we planned it that way" boys could be on hand with a few well chosen remarks, or possibly the commander in chief of the pig killers might even tell us what it is all about.

They could tell us at the same time about the thousands upon thousands of tons of steel scrap that they sold to the Japs while China was fighting for its life.

The New Dealers have always said that they knew all about the war coming and possibly they wanted to make sure that the Nips had something to shoot back with at our boys on Guadalcanal, Saipan, and Iwo Jima. The wounded and maimed would hardly feel any better knowing that what hit them was furnished in part by a benevolent New Deal.

We used to wonder how millions of Germans could be duped by a man like Hitler. It is high time that we searched our own hearts and souls before the same thing happens to us.

ENEMY PRISONERS FARE BETTER

Clinton, Ia., April 3—We patients here at Schick General hospital feel that all of our fighting has been in vain. Tonight at supper several of my buddies and I composed the tail-end of the chow line. One of these fellows asked for a second piece of chicken, and was told by one of the civilian employes that he would have to come back for it after he had eaten the first piece.

Then, not five minutes later, the prisoners of war were eating. No one stays there to give them their food. They serve themselves. Each one took four pieces or more.

Why doesn't this government clamp down? Of course, the government would start the "old army game" of passing the buck if there was some kind of a stink raised about these incidents.

We fellows who have been giving out all get our food given to us by home front heroes, and they more or less ration it to us. Then they turn the place into a nice, big banquet hall for those same Germans who have been killing and wounding our buddies and your sons and brothers. At times we wonder just why we are fighting. Why can't something be done to treat these people as prisoners instead of guests?

"THE MORE ABUNDANT LIFE"

Coalport, Pa., March 26 — While Washington deluges us with propaganda about alleged food shortages abroad, soldiers in Europe who correspond with me report an abundance of meat and food of all other kinds in France, Belgium, Holland, and even Germany.

Stores in central Pennsylvania coal mining towns have very little on their shelves excepting soap and soda crackers. Meats and all groceries are generally lacking. There is considerable discontent, with miners asking how they can be expected to produce soft coal on soap and soda crackers.

What a miserable fraud this "more abundant life" business has turned out to be. It is hard to understand how grown men monkeying around in Washington under the impression they are operating a government can be so foolish. Sooner or later they are sure to be found out, regardless of how cunningly they arrange their deception.

SEIZURE OF IDLE MEAT PLANTS BY ARMY PROPOSED

Plan Reported Favored at Vinson Parley

BY LAURENCE BURD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 6—A proposal that the army seize and operate idle meat packing plants for its own use was tossed today into the growing food shortage controversy.

The suggestion was advanced by Chairman Anderson [D., N. M.] of the special house food investigating committee, which met today at the White House with War Mobilizer Vinson and other high administration officials.

Anderson told reporters after the conference that his committee proposed the army take-over plan on the theory that now idle slaughtering plants should be put to use to increase meat production and perhaps alleviate civilian shortages.

Reports Vinson Approves

He said the suggestion was received favorably by Vinson and that army officials agreed to study it.

The congressman said he had no estimate of the number of plants now idle, but added that a number have been shut down because of alleged inability to operate at any profit under government price ceilings.

Anderson said data presented at today's meeting indicate meat will be even scarcer, starting July 1, than at present.

Estimates now indicate, he said, that meat available for the third quarter will be one billion pounds less than "desired requirements." Thus, he added, there is little chance of much increase soon in civilian meat rations, already 20 per cent below last year.

"The shortage is so acute," he said, "that unless supplies are substantially increased there will be virtually no meat for export [to other countries] by July 1.

Source of Added Supply

"I don't think packing plants should be idle when meat is so short at home and is needed abroad. Reports indicate there are plenty of cattle, but not enough coming to market. If the army would take over some plants and thus supply some of its own beef more might be released for domestic consumption."

Anderson said he was not prepared at this time to explain how army reopening and operation of closed packing plants would bring more cattle to market. He emphasized that there are many details of the proposal to be worked out. Anderson indicated that perhaps the army might work out a price system that would bring cattle from the ranges to the plants it operated.

The army, Anderson said, now has first claim thru set-aside orders on 60 per cent of all prime beef and 80 per cent of all canner and cutter beef produced in federally inspected plants.

Suggests Relaxed Standards

He said meat distribution in this country might also be aided if the army would relax standards on meat it buys. This could result in the army spreading its purchases more evenly thruout the country.

The congressman said consideration is being given to reducing the meat allotment to hotels and restaurants, so housewives will get more. Hotels and other institutions now get 15 per cent of the domestic meat ration.

Discussing the pork shortage, Anderson said the committee proposed raising the support, or floor price, on hogs to $13 a hundred pounds, compared with $12.50 at present, but leaving the ceiling unchanged at $14.75.

New Deal officials present at the meeting, besides Vinson, included War Food Administrator Marvin Jones, Economic Stabilizer Davis, OPA Chief Bowles, UNRRA Director Lehman, and Foreign Economic Administrator Crowley.

The house committee will visit Chicago April 16-17 to hear meat industry officials' views on the shortage.

RUSSIA GRANTS PART AUTONOMY TO U. S. CHURCH

New York, April 6 (AP)—The Very Rev. Archpriest Joseph Dzvonchik announced today that Alexei, patriarch of Moscow and all the Russians, had granted limited autonomy to the Russian orthodox and Greek Catholic church of North America.

Dzvonchik, a delegate to the conference of the Russian orthodox church, said he had received a ukase, or decree, from Alexei which stated that if its terms were accepted "the interdict [suspension] laid upon the American church by the Moscow patriarchy on Jan. 4, 1935, is removed immediately prior to the all-American sobor [conference]."

The ukase provided for an all-American orthodox church conference to be held before May 30 to elect a metropolitan, who should be confirmed by the Moscow patriarchy, Dzvonchik said. The American church recently applied for autonomy.

LEADER IN SHELL STRIKE QUIZZED BY DRAFT BOARD

Frank Powers, 31, of 905 N. Waller av., who last month conducted a six day strike at the Cribben & Sexton Co., 700 N. Sacramento av., which involved 850 members of the United Stove Workers union, affiliated with the Confederated Unions of America, last night was called before his draft board to explain his connection with the strike. Powers has a 2-A [essential] classification. Francis D. Scully, draft board chairman and an attorney with offices at 1 N. La Salle st., said no decision was reached at the hearing and that the board's investigation would continue. The company manufactures 105 mm. artillery shells and other materials for the army and navy.

Mrs. Elise Bundesen, 29, of 8226 Luella av., was awarded a divorce yesterday from her husband, Tech. Sgt. Herman N. Bundesen Jr., 32, son of the president of the board of health, after she testified that he deserted her Sept. 10, 1942.

Chief witness for Mrs. Bundesen was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Bundesen Shadwick, 7410 Oglesby av.

Superior Judge John A. Sbarbaro, who heard the case, awarded Mrs. Bundesen $120 a month alimony and support for the couple's three children. Frank E. Cantwell represented Mrs. Bundesen.

50 GOLD MEDALS GIVEN TO PUPILS IN PAPER DRIVE

Fifty boys and girls who led the elementary public school drive for waste paper were given gold medals yesterday at a party in the Morrison hotel. In the last 40 weeks the schools had collected 22,000 tons of paper, to lead the nation in paper salvage.

Donald Wakeman, 11, of 5357 Chicago av., and Joan Pflug, 12, of 705 N. Latrobe av., both pupils at Howe school, were crowned king and queen for collecting the most paper individually. Donald salvaged 8,040 pounds in five weeks, and Joan, 5,700 in the same period.

In behalf of Mayor Kelly, Sheriff Mulcahy presented the medals. Each winner was commissioned a junior deputy sheriff. Schools that led in the drive received war production board certificates from James T. O'Connor, executive secretary of salvage for WPB.

Meanwhile, Superintendent Johnson pointed out that school drives were conducted without pressure from officials or teachers.

WMC PRESSURE CLOSED MOVIE, OWNER CHARGES

Toledo, O., April 6 [Special]—Jack O'Connell, owner of the curfew-flouting Loop theater, today announced he would hereafter observe the midnight closing order. He said he was forced to the decision by the war man power commission's "pressuring" the motion picture machine operators' union into withdrawing his operator at midnight.

"The principles I fought for definitely have been established," O'Connell asserted. "The WMC has seen fit to do by pressure what it could not do legally and has thereby admitted I was right."

Since O'Connell began ignoring the curfew on March 19 he has maintained the edict had no legal basis and that his theater could not be closed legally. In a letter to Ralph Snyder, WMC area director, O'Connell referred to the WMC's "tentative" victory, asserted that "your right and power to order me to close the Loop theater is not dropped," and noted that his appeal from Snyder's closing order is still pending.

AGED MAN SAVES INFANT AS WIFE, 64, DIES IN FIRE

Mrs. Grace Phillips, 64, was killed and her husband, 84, and 9 month old great-granddaughter were in St. Joseph Mercy hospital, Aurora, yesterday with serious burns as the result of an explosion and fire which destroyed the Phillips home north of Sugar Grove, near Aurora, on Thursday night.

Police learned that Mr. and Mrs. Phillips had just sat down to dinner, with their great-grandchild, Barbara Jean Larson, playing near them on the floor, when Mrs. Phillips got up to see if she had turned out the fire in a kitchen oil stove. As she opened the door a blast of flame exploded into the dining room, knocking her to the floor.

Snatching up the child, Phillips raced into the yard. Three times he tried in vain to fight his way thru the flames to his wife, suffering severe burns around his face, hands, and legs, but each time he was nearly overcome by the heat and the pain of his burns. Two hours later, Mrs. Phillips' charred body was recovered from the ruins of the house.

German Cruiser Leipzig Torpedoed, Swedes Say

LONDON, April 6 (AP)—The German cruiser Leipzig, carrying 500 troops and refugees, was hit by several torpedoes en route from Gdynia, and had to be towed into port, the Swedish radio said today.

Reported at Jutland Port.

MALMO, Sweden, April 6 (AP)—The German cruiser Leipzig has arrived at Aarhus in Jutland in a crippled condition, a reliable source reported today. The warship was said to have been struck by a torpedo in the Baltic.

FIND BUILDERS CAN BEAT U. S. CLEARING SLUMS

A senate investigation of slum conditions in the nation's capital discloses that the government has made little headway in wiping out blighted areas and that private builders there are prepared to do the job in six years provided the government stays out of the home construction field.

These are the conclusions reached by the nonpartisan, fact finding national industrial conference board after an analysis of testimony given before the senate committee on the District of Columbia at a number of hearings held between October, 1943, and June, 1944. The hearings were called to review the practices and policies of the national capital housing authority, the government agency charged with solution of capital slum problems, and to draft a program which would accelerate accomplishment of the agency's objective.

Eliminate Only 17 Alleys

As summarized by the board, the NCHA has made "slow progress since its establishment in 1934 in clearing Washington's inhabited slum alleys." Of the 190 existing in 1934, NCHA has eliminated 17, other public agencies 13, and private owners 13, leaving 147 still in existence.

Its work was described as being hampered by irregular and inadequate appropriations, and also by government directives which assigned to the agency the task of providing housing for war workers.

The board said government housing costs proved to be substantially higher than private construction because NCHA has built "with a social rather than profit purpose in view." This viewpoint meant the inclusion in its projects of "generous provision for open space and community facilities not customarily provided in low-rent private projects built for profit and sale." All such properties are exempt from local taxes.

Pledge 24,000 New Houses

Instead of continuing what they called the slow-moving and more or less ineffective government program, local private builders, speaking thru the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, proposed in the course of the senate investigation that the task be left exclusively to them.

They pledged themselves to wipe out slum areas and to build 24,000 housing units in six years, provided public housing stayed out of the field from three to five years. Congress would be allowed to intervene at any time in the event of poor performance.

Another Trip

[TRIBUNE Photo]

Mrs. Elaine Andrews in the Union station yesterday.

Mrs. Elaine Andrews, 23, of 5982 Ridge av., a school teacher, has spent eight hours riding between Chicago and Fort Wayne, Ind., in the last two days, trying to meet her husband, Lt. Minor H. Andrews, 27, army flyer, for the last time before he goes overseas.

Mrs. Andrews went to Fort Wayne Thursday. She asked the hotel clerk if he had arrived, and he, in turn, inquired for her. Both were told the other one wasn't there, and they spent the night in separate rooms.

Yesterday, Mrs. Andrews came back to Chicago. Her husband telephoned her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ehlers of the Ridge av. address, to meet her and turn her back to Fort Wayne. Accordingly, after 30 minutes in Chicago, Mrs. Andrews was on her way back to Fort Wayne. It was a successful reunion, too. There were no second mistakes in room assignments, and the Andrewses did meet, finally, in Fort Wayne.

KELLY PROPOSES DELAYING CITY'S TRACTION FEES

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that he favored permitting the proposed metropolitan transit authority to operate temporarily a unified traction system without paying the city 3 per cent of gross receipts as compensation for the use of the streets.

Paymen. of compensation by the publicly owned authority, he indicated, should be delayed until that body has become a going concern and is well along with its modernization program. Three per cent of gross at the present earning rate of the elevated and surface lines would be about 2½ million dollars a year.

The 3 per cent factor was demanded in the ordinance of 1941, which was a part of a plan to unify the two traction properties under private ownership. This plan was rejected by the Illinois Commerce commission as financially unsound.

SURVEY SHOWS CURFEW FLOPS AS LABOR SPUR

The average rate of absenteeism in Chicago plants has not been reduced by the imposition of the midnight curfew, it was indicated yesterday in a survey of major war industries.

On some afternoon to midnight shifts, the curfew apparently induced a higher rate of absenteeism. Workers, unable to find their usual recreation centers open at night, failed to show up at their jobs in the day time, preferring to frequent the bars.

In only two of the eight plants surveyed was the rate of absence lower during March than in January.

Women Absent on Saturday.

In the Bendix Aviation corporation plant, 505 N. Sacramento av., where 70 per cent of the employes are women, the absenteeism on the Saturday afternoon shift from 4:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. has caused a disruption of work schedules.

In all the other plants surveyed, the average of absenteeism remained unchanged.

As a means of saving fuel, the curfew also failed to achieve the objectives outlined by James F. Byrnes, the former war mobilization director, the survey indicated.

Dim Lights' Saving Small.

M. R. Ely, executive secretary of the National Electric Light association, said that an exhaustive study of all available factors had shown that the dimout and curfew will save less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the coal used for power.

Other agencies said they were unable to estimate the savings of fuel. The power and light companies said it would be months before the exact figures could be compiled.

PICK 11 WOMEN ON CHAPLIN JURY TO HEAR RETRIAL

Los Angeles, Cal., April 6 (AP)—One man and 11 women were chosen as jurors today to hear the retrial of Joan Berry's paternity suit against Charlie Chaplin.

Testimony will begin Monday and Dr. Russell Starr, who attended Miss Berry when her baby, Carol Ann, was born 18 months ago, will be the first witness.

The 25 year old Miss Berry, Chaplin's former dramatic student, claims the comedian is the father of her child. Neither Miss Berry nor Chaplin is expected to appear in court until they are called as witnesses. The first trial of the suit ended in a jury disagreement last January.

BARBARA BRITTON

The bride was dressed simply in a purple silk gown, with hat to match, and wore a necklace of amethysts.

The marriage was kept secret because Barbara and her husband feel that their private lives should be kept separate from their careers. It was the first marriage for both.

BODY IN SEWER LINKED TO AUTO WITH GUNNY BAG

Police yesterday were endeavoring to trace a shining black La Salle sedan containing something wrapped in a gunny sack and seen last July touring the vicinity of Ohio st. and Union av. where the trussed up body of an apparent gang ride victim was recovered Thursday from a sewer catch basin. Police said the man had been dead at least six months.

A post-mortem examination revealed the victim had died of a skull fracture caused by a blow over the right eye. Two ribs had been broken, Dr. Samuel Levinson, coroner's physician, said.

Two finger prints which police were able to obtain were compared with prints of Joseph Mertsoc, 42, former bootlegger missing since last May, but did not match. Belief that the victim may have been Onofrio Vitale, missing since February, 1944, from his home in Hammond, Ind., were dispelled because his age and stature differed from the victim's.

The slain man had blue eyes, brown hair and weighed 185 pounds. He was 5 feet 6 inches tall and wore blue trousers and maroon colored socks with white clocking.

CHICAGO CARRIES 'SPIRIT OF '76' (HE'S A MARINE)

BY FRANK CIPRIANI
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

AT SEA ABOARD THE NEW U. S. CRUISER CHICAGO [Delayed]—The boys who sing "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli" are aboard this brand new fighting ship. The United States marines make up a sizable contingent, and are acquiring their sea legs on the "Big Shot's" shakedown cruise.

In command is Capt. Cliff A. Jones of Dallas, Tex., a veteran of Tarawa. Second in command is Lt. Don H. Blanchard of Inglewood, Cal., who fought at Guadalcanal.

Technically, the marines' principal duties on ships are to stand ship's watches and gun watches, to act as admiral's or captain's orderlies, to serve as guards of honor, and to act as brig, forecastle, gangway, and dock sentries. In addition, and they're doing a lot of it these days, they man guns and form landing parties.

Mid Westerners Aboard

Daily, the Chicago's contingent is put thru routine drilling. Most of the privates are green, altho one or two have had battle experience. Midwesterners among them are Corp. Robert W. Alabaugh of Kendallville, Ind.; Pvt. Albert N. Allie of Sturgeon Bay, Wis.; and Pvt. Roger A. Hagen of Washington Island, Wis.

The four principal non-coms are embattled veterans. There is Gunnery Sgt. Robert P. [Chungking] Ryan of Washington, D. C., who helped train Chinese guerrillas, and thus acquired his oriental nickname. The senior non-com, 1st Sgt. Joseph Romanchick of Edwardsville, Pa., who took a bust from sergeant major to his present rating to get sea duty, spent 26 months in the Pacific and saw plenty of action. And there is Gunnery Sgt. Alex Crecion of Martin's Ferry, O., who fought aboard the U. S. S. North Carolina at the Solomons and Marshall Islands.

Veterans of Hornet

And finally there is Platoon Sgt. Earl De Long of Norfolk, Va., whose possession of a silver star doesn't excite him half as much as approaching fatherhood. He's 23. Lt. Comdr. G. H. McAteer of Washington, D. C., senior medical officer of the Chicago, calls De Long "the Spirit of '76." Both were on the Hornet when it went down in the battle of Midway.

"I'll never forget De Long in that fight," recalled Comdr. McAteer. "He was wounded and bloody and fighting mad. His comrades were killed or wounded, but he wouldn't give up. We couldn't make him. He wrapped a towel or bandage around his bloodied head, just like that figure in the Spirit of '76 painting, and he worked the guns."

De Long doesn't like to talk about his exploit, but the citation signed by Adm. Halsey, awarding him the silver star for conspicuous gallantry, states that "De Long remained at his station until all other wounded had been treated. He then refused to be transferred to a destroyer with the other wounded, but returned to his battle station and remained there till the end of the engagement."

Friendly Rivalry

Traditional rivalry still exists between the marines and the sailors, but it is friendly [as a rule] and these days largely takes the form of competition for efficiency in the operation of anti-aircraft guns. The marines like to call themselves gyrenes or leathernecks. The first—gyrene—is a corruption of "guys" and "marines" as they were referred to long ago, the second a direct survival of the days of wooden ships when marines wore leather collars for protection against slashing cutlasses and pikes.

The marines and sailors have of course pet names for each other, but don't dare call them to each other's faces.

HUSBAND FACING DRAFT, WIFE KILLS 3 CHILDREN AND SELF

Deep River, Ia., April 6 (AP)—A 28 year old farm woman, apparently worried over the possible drafting of her husband, fatally burned herself and three children yesterday, Coroner W. R. Phillips said today.

Phillips said Mrs. Elsie Krakow poured gasoline on and set fire to her 6 weeks old baby, Michael; Carol, 2, and Mary Ann, 3, and then ignited her own gasoline soaked clothing.

The tragedy was discovered by the husband and father, Carl Krakow, who was working near the farmhouse. Krakow related that Mary Ann, her clothing aflame, ran screaming from the house: "Mother poured oil on us and set up on fire." Mary Ann died about six hours later. The bodies of the others were found in the house.

33d Division Vets Vote to Hold Reunion in Chicago

In deference to war time travel restrictions, the executive committee of the 33d Division Veterans' association voted last night to hold the association's annual reunion in Chicago, instead of in Peoria, as originally scheduled. The reunion will be a streamlined, one day meeting, June 15. The executive committee met in the Morrison hotel. Daniel M. Smith is president of the association.

NAZI PRISONERS SCOFF AT TALES ABOUT 'CODDLING'

Army Finds It Pays to Reward Good Conduct

a case of beer, give them cigarets, or give some other token of appreciation. Soon the news spreads that prisoners are "carousing."

"We could avoid such incidents by locking the prisoners up, keeping them always behind barbed wire, and get nothing in return," said one officer. "Then we'd soon have thousands of stir crazy men on our hands and more expense for the government. We think it's better to get 23,879,126 man days of work out of them, which we did during the last six months."

The army had no book of instructions on how to handle prisoners when the first batch arrived. As a result, the camp commanders had to learn by trial and error. Now everything is running smoothly in most camps, but there were tense moments in the early days.

"Our first idea was security," said a Camp Shelby officer. Once we sent out 1,000 prisoners to pick cotton, and we had a full battalion to guard them. Soon we saw that was ridiculous and reduced the size of the guard detachment."

New Plan Boosts Production

Last August the army adopted a policy of "calculated risk" and permitted camp commanders to let prisoners work on army posts, with only a roving guard to keep track of them. Production on their jobs immediately jumped 20 to 30 per cent at Camp Shelby, according to Col. T. B. Birdsong.

At Fort Custer, Mich., Maj. John M. Moore said production by his prisoners increased from 20 to 25 per cent when the guards were reduced. Fort Custer now uses one-sixth as many guards for 2,782 prisoners as were used in 1943 to guard 500 prisoners.

Camp commanders said most of their discipline problems were solved when they weeded out the trouble makers and sent them to special camps. At these camps the prisoners do not have the privilege of working, recreational facilities are extremely limited, and they get the minimum of comforts required under the Geneva convention. As nonworking prisoners, they get only 10 cents a day to spend in their canteens, while working prisoners get 80 cents a day.

Their Zeal Weakens

Most of the trouble makers were noncommissioned officers who, under the Geneva convention, cannot be required to work. But a few weeks of idleness in bleak barracks, with nothing to see outside except barbed wire fences, weakened the zeal of some of the fanatics. They begged to be sent to a camp where they could work, and signed releases waiving their rights as noncoms under the Geneva convention.

"The Nazis thrived on victories, but they can't stand a few weeks of boredom," remarked one American officer.

The 4th service command maintains a camp for trouble makers in Oklahoma. As a result, the word Oklahoma has a very unhappy meaning thruout all the prisoner of war camps in the south and has a salutory effect on discipline, American officers said.

Trouble makers in the camps of the 6th service command are packed off to a camp in Illinois, where the commanding officer stands for no nonsense. He explained that his policy is to ignore the prisoners' political ideas and aberrations; he is interested only in how well they behave and work.

Swift, Sure Punishment

The commanding officer of this camp said he is well aware that any sign of lax discipline will be interpreted by the prisoners as weakness of the American character, and justice therefore rarely is tempered with mercy. Disobedience brings swift, sure punishment, usually solitary confinement on bread and water. The Germans understand that treatment.

At camps where the prisoners work well and behave themselves, they receive certain privileges. They are permitted to play soccer on a field inside the compound. They can conduct night school classes and pursue various hobbies on their days off. They can organize concerts, present plays, and attend movies.

Camp commanders said the prisoners are never permitted to forget that such privileges are privileges, not rights, and can be taken away at any time. A man who disobeys rules and causes a whole compound to lose its privileges soon is an unpopular fellow. The prisoners themselves help to see that the offense is not repeated.

School Spirit at Camp Ellis

At Camp Ellis, Ill., Col. C. P. Evers reported that the prisoners have developed a kind of school spirit about their camp. Some of them asked permission to stencil "P. W. Camp Ellis" on their underwear. The permission was granted.

The rate of escapes from prisoner of war camps last year is cited as evidence that administration of the camps has not been lax. The rate of escapes from all federal penal institutions in the United States was .0044. The rate of escapes from prisoner of war camps was .0045.

LET VETS ALONE, HERSHEY URGES; RAPS 'PLANNING'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 6—Most war veterans will find their own way back into civilian life if the government, management, and labor "will let them alone," Maj. Gen. Hershey, selective service director, predicted today.

Maj. Gen. Hershey

In an address at a national employment conference sponsored by the American Legion, Hershey asserted he was "getting tired" of listening to government plans which indicate that if they "didn't lead veterans by the hand they would get lost." He told the government, labor, management, and agriculture representatives attending the meeting that they must deal only with veteran problems that wouldn't be taken care of otherwise and leave alone those which will solve themselves.

Denies Labor Charges

Hershey denied charges made earlier by labor representatives that the selective service interpretation of veterans reemployment rights gave returning soldiers and sailors "super-seniority." He said he believed the "worst thing that could happen to a veteran" would be to give them the impression that the world owed them a living. He added, however, that he didn't believe the door of employment should be closed to veterans because they went to war and others stayed home.

Hershey recommended that to the extent possible, war veterans should be given every consideration in civilian employment, and that the veteran who is able to solve his own problems should not be hindered by laws or labor agreements. He proposed that the individual community should do all it can to solve veteran employment problems and that only the cases of those which the community is unable to help should be referred to state or federal agencies.

Chicago Plan Explained

The plan sponsored by Chicago and midwestern business and industrial leaders which seeks to obtain pledges from industry that 25 per cent of all post-war jobs will be given to veterans was explained at the conference by Kenneth Burgher, Chicago public relations counsel. The organization to promote the plan is known as "industry for veterans" and was formed last Monday. Burgher announced that already the organization has obtained pledges for 37,500 jobs for veterans from midwestern firms employing 150,000 persons.

Robert J. Watt, international representative of the AFL, said the selective service interpretation of reemployment would give war veterans who worked six months in a plant before entering the service a status superior to workers employed for 20 years.

HUNT CONTINUES FOR 3 AND GIRL THEY KIDNAPED

Desplaines street police yesterday continued their search for three Negroes, one of them wearing an army uniform, who early Wednesday kidnaped a 19 year old girl after brandishing a knife at her escort, Nick Martini, 17, of 1220 S. Lawndale av.

Search also was being carried out for the girl, a blonde known only as Connie, whom Martini, a merchant marine sailor, said he had met the evening before in the Chicago theater. Police believe the girl withheld reporting the incident in fear of publicity.

Capt. Joseph Graney of the Desplaines st. station, in charge of the investigation, said Martini reported the woman had been abducted as they stood in a doorway near Washington blvd. and May st. where they walked after leaving the show. The girl mentioned in their conversation that she was a telephone operator, he said.

Three Negro war workers riding in a car similar to the one described by Martini were seized early yesterday morning but were released when Martini failed to identify them, Capt. Graney said. Several leads furnished by the phone company failed to produce the girl.

GUNMEN MENACE 3 IN STORE; TAKE $15,000 JEWELS

Chicago and Cicero police yesterday were searching for three armed, masked men who late Thursday night held up and robbed a jewelry store at 4802 Cermak rd., Cicero, of an estimated $15,000 in diamond rings.

In the store at the time of the robbery were two customers, Miss Dorothy Miles, 1442 49th av., Cicero, and John Savini, a sailor stationed at the Glenview naval base, and Clarence Seiger, son of the store owner.

They told police the three men entered the store, threatened them with the guns, and then swept the rings into shopping bags. The bandits, the witnesses said, were careful not to take anything but diamond rings.

THOUSANDS SEEK TO QUIT BRITAIN FOR DOMINIONS

Canada, South Africa May Get Most

LONDON, April 5 [Reuters]—The subject of migration from Britain and western Europe to British dominions probably will be discussed by delegates attending the commonwealth conference here before they break up to go to the San Francisco meeting of allied nations.

Acceleration of the end of the war has brought increased requests for facilities to emigrate. Dominion headquarters has been swamped with inquiries.

Canada Faces Problem

Canada faces the biggest problem of all—a large transport problem. Thousands of Canadians have married British women. A special department is dealing with applications for transportation of wives and children at the rate of about a hundred a day. So far over 20,000 have been received and it is expected that the final total will be between 25,000 and 30,000.

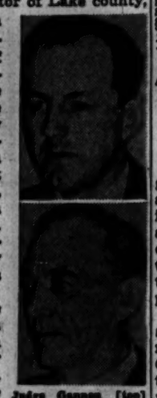
The South Africa branch handles 700 inquiries a week. Some of these deal with the possibilities of opening new industries there. The union of South Africa requires skilled men and women for its already expanding industries, but it is being made clear to prospective settlers that South Africa must first accommodate her returning service men.

Booklet Tells of Plans

The British government's plans for resettlement, reinstatement and retraining of millions of British soldiers have been printed in booklet form. Five million copies are now being distributed. Mention is made in the booklet about possible settlement in the dominions.

JUDGE'S OFFICE BECOMES COURT IN INDIANA FEUD

Charles W. Gannon, former Republican prosecutor of Lake county, Indiana, who on April 1 was appointed judge of the newly created Juvenile court in Lake county, yesterday held his first session of court in his law office at 560 Broadway, Gary, with Charles Collins, Crown Point Republican city chairman, as his bailiff.



Judge Gannon [top] and Bailiff Collins

Gannon, the only Republican office holder in Lake county for several years, had been unable to find space for his new court in any of the Lake county courthouses. Democratic office holders, under advice of County Atty. George Hershman, ignored the new court. They contended the law creating it was unconstitutional.

In the first entry in his new docket, Judge Gannon criticized Lake county officials for their attitude toward the Juvenile court, which under the new statute removes juvenile affairs from the Circuit court and the juvenile referee.

5TH PROPOSITION TO COME UP AT POLLS ON JUNE 4

A fifth proposition for referendum will have to be placed on the ballot in the June 4 judicial elections as the result of a bill signed Thursday by Gov. Green authorizing state municipalities to fix Municipal court clerk and bailiff salaries at not less than $2,500 or more than $3,500, Mayor Kelly said yesterday.

The newly enacted bill, he said, allows the municipalities to raise their clerk and bailiff salaries $1,000 a year if they desire but the raise must be approved in a referendum to the voters.

Even if the proposition is approved here, he said, nothing can be done to raise the salaries until the 1946 budget is made up next November. Mayor Kelly said he believed the salaries should not be raised above $3,000, which would make them comparable with the annual pay of police and firemen.

Other propositions for referendum on the June ballot are the plan for creating a metropolitan transit authority; a slum clearance plan calling for a 5 million dollar bond issue to be matched by a 5 million dollar loan from the state; a 20 million dollar bond issue for the post-war construction of additional airport facilities in Chicago, and a bond issue of up to 24 million dollars to be used by the park board to improve parks thruout the city.

FROST HITS SOME MIDWEST AREAS BUT SKIPS CITY

The city and suburbs failed to get their expected frost yesterday and a light freeze in the surrounding country failed to do any harm, a survey of horticulturists and farmers disclosed. Some damage to fruit trees occurred in spotted sections of the midwest, however, when temperatures dropped to 27 degrees.

Central Ohio suffered severe damage to its fruit trees as the thermometer dipped to 27 degrees at Columbus. Horticulturists reported thousands of dollars damage to apples, peaches, cherries, plums, and strawberries in central Kentucky.

There was some damage to the southern Illinois apple orchards but the peach crop was unharmed, said L. L. Clovis of the Illinois Agricultural association. Iowa had $750,000 frost damage, one report declared.

There is little danger of any more frost for the next several days, the weather bureau reported.

At The Tribune farms there was no damage to flowering trees and shrubs or to farm crops.

FOUND STRANGLED IN LOOP HOTEL

A man tentatively identified by papers in his possession as Horace A. Love, 60, of Fort Dodge, Ia., was found dead, strangled by an electric cord and apparently a suicide, in his room in the Planters hotel, 19 N. Clark st., last night.

WAR'S WOUNDED PREACH SERMON TO JOB SEEKERS

Vets Beg Civilians to Aid Production

One soldier swung himself over to a desk on crutches. Another gripped a cane to help his unsteady legs. Two more walked erect, but still limped. Civilians, waiting patiently in never ending lines, looked at them in wonderment.

The scene was the United States Employment service offices at 308 N. Michigan av. yesterday. Wounded veterans of France, Italy, and the Pacific were appearing there by arrangement with the war man power commission to tell applicants for jobs, transfers, and releases of war plants needing more employes to attain production quotas.

The veterans are Chief Warrant Officer George L. Stackhouse, 40, of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Corp. Howard Arant, 23, of Danville, Vermillion county; Pvt. Lloyd Eppers, 25, of Donnellson, Ia., and Pvt. Harry Winefield, 21, of 4757 Ingleside av. Stackhouse is assigned to limited duty at Camp Ellis. The others are patients in Gardiner General hospital.

Veteran a Pacific Casualty

Stackhouse, who is married and has three children, was wounded by shrapnel on Guadalcanal, and survived a 900 foot fall from a B-17. The plane was shot down over the Russell Islands and his parachute failed to open. He lost consciousness when he fell into the sea and came to on a P-T boat, his left leg fractured in 11 places and paralyzed.

Corp. Arant, who uses crutches, was wounded in both legs and in his right hand in France July 31. His left leg still is in a cast. He has been at the USES offices all week, talking especially to job seekers who are not keen on war work, and workers trying to get nonessential jobs.

Leg Broken, Feet Frozen

Pvt. Winefield, looking even younger than 21, twisted his fingers around his cane in embarrassment when asked about his wounds. He suffered a double fracture of his leg from a bullet while on patrol duty at Cassino, Italy, Dec. 27, 1943. His feet and hands were frozen in the three days and nights it took him to crawl eight miles back to our lines.

Pvt. Eppers, a former farmer, was struck by a mortar shell on Leyte, and carries 11 pieces of shrapnel in his thigh.

Stackhouse and Eppers met one applicant who didn't need any urging. She is Miss Esther Augustine, 21, of Geneva, who applied for a job as waitress at Pearl Harbor. All four of her brothers have been in service.

MOVIE BANNED IN MEMPHIS ON RACIAL GROUNDS

Memphis, Tenn., April 6 (AP)—Lloyd T. Binford, chairman of the Memphis board of motion picture censors, today said the picture, "Brewster's Millions," had been banned here because it "presented too much familiarity between the races."

"The movie has Rochester [Eddie Anderson], the Negro comedian, in an important role," Binford said. "He has too familiar a way about him and the picture presents too much social equality and racial mixture. We don't have any trouble with racial problems down here and we don't intend to encourage any by showing movies like this."

SALESMAN DIES WHEN HIS AUTO RAMS TROLLEY

William Davis, 51, of 426 W. 65th pl., an automobile sales manager, was killed yesterday when his car collided head-on with a Stony Island av. street car at 63d st. No passengers on the street car were hurt.

Fred Wojon, 57, of 9237 Stony Island av., died in South Chicago hospital of injuries suffered March 30 when he was struck by an automobile in Stony Island av., near 92d pl. The driver, Robert Bandemer, 8120 Dorchester av., said Wojon walked into the side of the car.

Looking Ahead with

GRAHAM-PAIGE

A special message to the automobile and farm equipment dealers and distributors of America, who are watching developments at Graham-Paige with deep interest. Read this clear statement by Joseph W. Frazer, for thirty years a key figure in the industry, now chairman of Graham-Paige.

by Joseph W. Frazer

Hundreds of automobile dealers and distributors in America have written me about franchises for our post-war automobile. Others also have inquired about handling our new farm tractors, Rototillers, and our general line of farm equipment. So I am addressing these remarks particularly to the men who bring such products to the public.

For years I have enjoyed a close personal contact with my dealer and distributor organizations. Today I am proud to share with them our plans for the future—plans that will mean much to every man who has a stake in the sale of automobiles and farm equipment.

The automobile we will build, as soon as the Army and Navy tell us our war jobs are finished, will make automotive history. It will be new from the ground up—not a revamp of a '42 model. It will employ new engineering principles that will result in greater comfort, economy, roadability, ease of handling.

It will make use of new materials, new structural devices, new distributions of mass and load. These will mean lighter weight, more efficient application of power, greater strength, greater stability, greater safety.

It will seat six passengers in comfort, and achieve style, beauty, roominess and utility never before equalled. Yet it will conform to conventional body lines in such a way as to achieve unquestioned elegance.

But our post-war automobile is only part of the story we have to tell.

We are going to manufacture an entirely new line of modern farm equipment, including a general-purpose tractor with several basic and exclusive advantages that will save time, labor and operating costs.

We will make and sell the Rototiller, whose potentialities have been noted and acclaimed in the press of the nation. This machine does the work of plow, disc and harrow in one operation and does it better than all three combined! It promises to revolutionize both small-acreage and large-scale farming methods.

We will offer three separate franchises for our dealers and distributors. One will be for the automobile, one for Rototiller, and one for our general farm equipment, including tractors. Only in special cases will the same dealer or distributor handle all three.

Yes, the future holds great promise for Graham-Paige dealers and distributors, and for the public who will use the products they sell. More than ever, from now on, it will pay to "keep watching the news from Graham-Paige."

News of Engagements Shares Interest with Day's Weddings

BY JUDITH CASS

THE first Saturday after Easter, traditionally one of the most popular spring wedding days, brings news of two weddings to come in the future as well as of three ceremonies today. The Highland Park home of Dr. and Mrs. Kellogg Speed is a-buzz with excitement over the presence of their daughter, Ensign Helen Marjorie Speed of the WAVES, and Ensign James H. Hensinger of the naval reserve, to whom her engagement is being announced today.

At home to meet her future brother-in-law is another of Dr. and Mrs. Speed's daughters, Miss Ann Speed, a student at the University of Michigan. Yeoman Patricia Speed of the WAVES will learn of her sister's engagement in Hawaii, where she is stationed.

Miss Speed and her fiance, son of Mrs. Helen M. Hensinger of Allentown, Pa., are stationed in Indian Head, Md., where they will return tomorrow. She is a graduate of the Roycemore school and of the University of Michigan, to which she transferred from Vassar college. Ensign Hensinger received a degree in chemical engineering from Lehigh university.

Other romantic news is contained in the announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage May 12 in Washington, D. C., of Miss Virginia Chapin to Lt. John Edgar Freeman Jr. of the navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman of Winnetka. The announcement is made by Miss Chapin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Egbert Chapin of Stratford, N. J.

Miss Chapin attended Guilford college and George Washington university and for three years has been employed by the army air forces in Washington, D. C., where her fiance is stationed with the bureau of aeronautics. Lt. Freeman is a graduate of the Asheville school and Princeton university and after entering the navy studied aeronautical engineering at the University of Minnesota. He served for 20 months on the staff of the commander of the naval air forces in the Pacific.

Lt. Freeman's brother-in-law and sister, Lt. [j. g.]] and Mrs. Lester Tibbals, are in Winnetka for a visit with her parents before going to the west coast. Lt. Tibbals has been an instructor at the naval reserve midshipmen's school at Columbia university in New York for more than two years and now is to have overseas duty.

Today's Weddings

The marriage at 4:30 p. m. today in St. Chrysostom's church of Miss Mary Ann McDoel Wyman and Andrew Werner Lawson Jr. has bought together a large group of out of town relatives and friends who will go from the church to a reception following in the Fortnightly given by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. William Kennard Kenly. Here from Bronxville, N. Y., are the bride's father, Walter F. Wyman, Mrs. Wyman, and her son, Jerome. Mr. Wyman's sister, Mrs. Heaton Treadway, and Mr. Treadway, have come from Stockbridge, Mass.

The bridegroom's great uncle, William Leslie Lawson of White Plains, N. Y., and his daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Maddock, and Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson Jr. also are here, as are Edgar Rowe of Tryon, N. C., whose daughter, Miss Ruth Rowe, is to be one of Miss Wyman's five attendants; Miss Alice Smith of Boston, and Miss Janet Weakley of St. Louis.

The bride's traditional white satin gown will be trimmed with rosepointe lace which belonged to her maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. William H. McDoel. Mr. Lawson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawson of Scott st., and his bride, will live in Boston "for the duration" while he is doing research work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

When Miss Loretta Omara and John J. Walsh Jr. are married at 11 a. m. today in St. Luke's church, River Forest, the bride will wear the ivory rose pointe lace and satin gown with a long train in which her sisters, Mrs. Alexander Burke and Mrs. Edmond Branand, repeated their wedding vows. She also will wear a string of pearls given to her by the bridegroom. After the ceremony the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Omara, will give a reception in the 19th Century Woman's club in Oak Park.

Mrs. Burke will serve as matron of honor and Mrs. Branand and another sister, Ann, as bridesmaids. Petty Officer William Walsh will be his brother's best man. After an eastern wedding trip Mr. Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh of River Forest, and his bride will live in Oak Park.

Two naval reserve officers will be married today in San Diego, Cal., where Ensign Mary Kathryn Burlingame of the WAVES, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin Burlingame of Wilmette, will become the bride of Lt. Richard Frederick Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund E. Young of San Marino, Cal. The ceremony will take place at 5 p. m. in the First Presbyterian church of San Diego, with a reception following in the Imperial lounge of the San Diego club.

Keep Letters Going to Yank, Girl Is Urged

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Few high school girls have ever had an experience as big or as important as the experience, common to high school boys, of going into service. And only a mature and understanding gal can share the importance of that experience. Once a boy is in uniform and away from home under new circumstances and in strange surroundings, it isn't fair to expect him to react as he did when he was just an ordinary Joe interested in high school, homework, basketball games, good dance music, and an occasional Friday night date. But a girl who can understand is the kind any fellow wants to have behind him. Take, for example, the story told in this letter:

"Just about five weeks ago my friend left for the army air corps. When he first went into service he wrote regularly, and I still write to him almost every day. But I have not heard from him now for almost two weeks. I see his sister frequently, and she told me that he has been washed out of the air corps into the regular army. She said it has been the first thing he has ever tackled and failed and that his pride is hurt. It doesn't make a bit of difference to me whether he is a pilot or a private because I like him so much. I am not sure whether his disappointment is the reason he has stopped writing to me.

"I know he likes me because he had asked me several times to go steady, but I didn't like the idea as I am only 16. I date other fellows now and I write to a couple of boys also in service, but this boy, for the last eight months, was my special friend. We never had a serious disagreement and I know he has nothing to be angry with me about now. I don't know whether I should continue to write to him or not. My mother said I should just drop his friendship and forget him, but that doesn't solve anything. . . ."

This is one time you should take a chance. Keep writing to the boy; if he is hurt and worried he will be counting on your letters more than ever. You might even mention, if you can find just the right words, that you know he was washed out of the air corps. If you bring up the subject first, he may not mind talking about it. Your mother is probably basing her opinion on common etiquet standards, but this is one situation that isn't covered by the rules of the book.

Collection of Clothing for War Area Needy Discussed by Women

Representatives of more than 50 women's organizations making up the women's division of the United National Clothing collection, which is seeking to gather wearing apparel for the needy people of war ravaged countries, met yesterday at 209 S. La Salle st. to discuss plans for the campaign.

With Mrs. Harriet M. Robertson, division chairman, presiding, the women voted to form a committee on sorting and packing clothing in order to meet the need for workers in 100 secondary collection centers. The committee will be made up of one member each from various large organizations. The group also organized a speakers' bureau, headed by Mrs. A. A. Landry, who represents the Alliance of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in the drive. In addition it was decided to enlist women's groups to mend and darn the clothing collected.

34th in Series of Revues Is Distinct Hit

Another sparkling revue, "Nic-Nacs of 1945," opened last night in the South Shore Country club, and will be repeated tonight. It is the club's 34th annual follies. The musical opened as usual with a sprightly chorus whose members are daughters and granddaughters of club members, and closed with a riotous scene, "Black Market Opera," in Gilbert and Sullivan style. In between there were skits, songs, dances, and jokes.

One hit scene was danced by five beachcombers "past draft age," who did the "Hula Hop," and these men joined a larger group to perform to great applause the "Dance of the Nymphs," complete with pastel ballet skirts. Fred Herendeen, president of the club and author of the revue, and his daughter, Miss Helen Herendeen, cooperated in an office satire.

Other high spots of the revue include a glamorous crystal dance scene with spectacular jeweled costumes and headgear; a fast dance number with 12 girls demonstrating jive to a ballerina [Mary Leonore Taaffe], who finally sees the light; Jerry Mickle and Gloria Oosterbeek singing "East Is West," and a modern dance by Patty Pugh.

The "Follies ball," which will follow tonight's performance, will be cut short because of the curfew. Mrs. Paul Flagg is chairman of the revue, and Ed Schooley served as director.

ON THE RECORD

—By Claudia Cassidy

Melchior at the Movies, Burl Ives' Ballads, Iturbi Chopin, and Singles from Boston and Detroit

When Lotte Lehmann was in town for her lieder recitals, one of them happened to coincide with Lauritz Melchior's birthday, which he celebrated playing poker with local cronies. She was jubilant at having found a suitable birthday present for a man who has "two of everything." It was a necktie covered with income tax symbols, and Mme. Lehmann said gleefully "That will fix him for making more money with one little joke than I make by singing so hard."

Well, as you know, the man who can hunt bears and sing Tristan the same day is now the darling of the radio and no doubt will mop up Hollywood and points east in his new M-G-M picture. Anticipating just that, Victor has released an album of the songs he sings in that picture [M-990; four 10 inch records], which was called "Thrill of a Romance" the last I heard, tho it sounds like a working title. They include Grieg's "I Love You," in Danish and English, a version of Schubert's Serenade that sounds more "Blossom Time" than Lehmann, a Stoll arrangement of Hubay's "Lonely Night," and Victor Herbert's "I Want What I Want When I Want It," with chorus, as is "Vive l'Amour," a song of toasts which has the redoubtable Dane yodeling "Here's mud in your eye."

As far as I am concerned, Mr. Melchior can sing Chinese with a guitar in the middle of Soldiers' field, and I'll be there to listen. With that voice and one of the most exuberant personalities extant, he can do just about anything, and does. But I'll still take him first as Tristan with a dash of Siegmund or maybe Othello.

That Man Ives

Burl Ives' resounding success as the beloved ballad singer of "Sing Out, Sweet Land!" has stirred up new inquiries about his recordings. The old Okeh set, now Columbia C-103, is available, with the "Riddle Song," "The Cowboy's Lament," "I Know Where I'm Going," "Darling Cory," "Cotton Eye Joe," and others, including "Peter Gray," who rhymes with Pennsylcvan-i-a and Susquehann-i-a, and a new Asch album is due soon, with "Rock Candy Mountain" and other favorites. There's nothing quite like Mr. Ives in person, but he and his guitar get along fine with records, too.

Brand New

Jose Iturbi "ghosted" Chopin for "Song to Remember," and Victor rushes out with what it calls a showpiece [S-P 4; two 10 inch records in a folder with pockets], holding the Mazurka in B flat, Op. 7, No. 1; the Waltzes in D flat, Op. 64, No. 1, and C sharp minor, No. 2, and the Fantaisie Impromptu, which has to be completed on a second side. The performance is bravura Chopin, a little preoccupied with shiny surface, but good in its style. . . . Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston orchestra have filled a Victor 12 inch with Tschaikowsky's waltz from the Serenade for Strings, superbly played, and Grieg's sentimental tribute to "The Last Spring." . . . Karl Krueger and the Detroit orchestra make their Victor debut with an effective version of Offenbach's "Orpheus in Hades" overture, which holds so many reminders, in dreamy waltz and effervescent can-can, of "Gaité Parisienne."

Stage Notes

Plans to stage the musical version of "Cyrano de Bergerac" in the Civic Opera house about the middle of May fell thru for lack of a suitable singer for the title role, and now "The Three Waltzes" is being considered. This is a musical based on the melodies of the Strausses, father and son, and Oscar Straus. . . . With Grieg rivaling Strauss in Broadway fame and a Tschaikowsky musical pending, it was inevitable that Chopin should land on the stage. His music is being arranged for "Polonaise," in which Jan Kiepura will impersonate Kosciuszko.

Music Notes

The Detroit Symphony orchestra is taking no chances on losing Karl Krueger as conductor, having just signed him to a 10 year contract, believed to be the longest yet signed by an American symphony orchestra and its music director. . . . Interesting gossip is that Massimo Freccia, conductor of the New Orleans Symphony orchestra, will come to Ravinia this summer and that Nathan Milstein will be one of the soloists.

Crisp Taffeta Is Rustling at Style Showings

BY REA SEEGER

The provocative rustle of crisp taffeta, the most feminine sound effect of all, is now heard in the spring fashion showings. The high school crowd appreciates the breezy scotch plaid dance dresses, the models with wide swirling skirts of plaid taffeta, and the high necked blouse top of slinky black jersey. Career girls are rushing the vestee and blouse collections for the newest fake fronts and sleeveless blouses of huge plaid check or striped taffetas, these to be used to dramatize suits.

The newest taffetas are those of unusual stripes, lime with raspberry, and a third shade, yellow. Other eye catching combinations include vivid blue, scarlet, and emerald green; mauve with dubonnet, red, orange, and tangerine; also chartreuse with baby blue. They're the most exciting color combinations ever seen on thin, smart taffeta. Many of the fake fronts or dickees are of bias cut taffeta to make them fit perfectly around the neckline. A big bow of the same material is tied below the chin. They're bewitchingly gay and feminine, ideal for suit jacket wear.

New floor length dinner and dance dresses are also of the vividly colored and patterned taffetas. Wide, wide skirts accentuate the very small doll-like waistline. The bodices are demurely high around the neckline and few have anything that could be called even a shadow of a sleeve. Very gala occasion gowns are cut with a very deep décolletage, without anything in the way of shoulder straps—the narrow tape band goes around the neck, like a tape halter strap. Stripes, checks, and plaids in bright spring colors predominate.

3 drops Tabasco sauce

Soak gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Dissolve in hot water, cool, and add other ingredients. Chill until firm in individual molds or one pint size ring mold. Fill ring with fish or fruit salad. Arrange on crisp greens and top with French dressing. HELEN MUELLER,

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

"Can I preserve fresh milk by bringing it to a boil and sealing it in fruit jars?"

No. You should leave canned milk to professional canners. If you have a quantity of milk which you can't use fresh, why not let it sour and make cottage cheese of it, or use it in cooking? Even homogenized milk makes wonderful cheese—the consistency is that of cream cheese, smooth and fluffy.

"Why are my pancakes always thick? I like thin ones."

Thin batter, thin pancakes. Add milk to your standard batter to make it quite "runny." Thin French pancakes are made from a really soupy batter. Be sure your griddle is hot enough.

"How may mineral oil be used in cooking?"

Mineral oil, which contains no calories, most frequently is used as a salad oil, but could be used in frying foods or for any purpose which ordinarily is served by salad oil. There is some objection to its use in cooking since scientists have discovered that it absorbs vitamin A and carries it with it out of the body.

"Should cucumbers be soaked in salt water before using?"

For bread and butter pickles, sliced cucumbers are always soaked in order to make them very crisp. For salads, it is better to buy a firm, fresh cuke and slice it directly into the salad, as there is some loss of vitamins in soaking.

"Can moldy sirup be used if the mold is removed?"

Yes.

"I got a ham for Christmas which I was saving for a special occasion. It seems to be moldy. Is is good?"

Here's a major tragedy in these meatless days. Many persons fail to realize that modern, mild-cured hams must be treated like fresh meat. They keep very little longer than fresh meat. You should have eaten this ham by New Year's day at the latest. I'm sorry!

"How long will a fresh pot roast keep?"

Don't try to keep it more than four or five days in your meat keeper.

"HANGOVER SQUARE"

By Mae Tinée

"Hangover Square" has nothing whatsoever to do with little men with sledge hammers or similar phenomena of the morning after. It's the name of a rather charming little London square bounded by cobbled streets and illuminated by gas lamps. One of its residents is a musician and a madman, and the film is the story of his crimes and how they occurred.

Laird Cregar, who made your blood run cold in "The Lodger," once more is a criminal, and it seemed to me that this, his last, performance was his finest. His subsequent death introduces great irony into many of the events in the story.

A composer and pianist, he becomes a homicidal maniac under certain conditions, in which period he kills any one who seems to be obstructing him. He is involved with two women—one a sincere friend interested in aiding his career, the other a wily, winsome wench who plays cat and mouse with him until he writes music which brings her success—and they both affect his life.

I have noticed lately that piano music is being used as background in films more and more often and with increasing effectiveness. Piano and orchestra are used with great skill in the climax of this film, and the music itself has an interesting theme. The demented man gradually becomes aware of his crimes, and on the night he plays the concerto which is his masterpiece the music swells to a crescendo as the trap closes in on him, and the ending is most dramatic.

The cast is an able one, and Linda Darnell is feline and fetching as Netta. Altho George Sanders' part is comparatively small, his performance, as usual, is smooth and surefooted.

The film has suspense and horror aplenty, excellent photography, and sensitive and effective direction.

[If they release many more of these tales of death and demented-ness the movie critics' prayers will certainly include the old one about deliverance from "ghoulies and ghosties and long-leggedy beasties and things that go 'bump' in the night."]

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Just Too Too . . .

The bosses are beginning to talk like the secretaries, as witness the boss, reported by E. Mellich, who called his secretary on the phone, extension 222, and asked:

Is this too too too divine?

Why Not?

Why not some flowers and ribbon and lace?
Why not relax to a sociable grin?

ISABELLE GILLESPIE YOUNG.

Opposites

Abe Martin, that mythical, homespun philosopher, says, "If a man isn't up on a thing, he usually is down on it. P. M. P.

Remember Bill Nye's poster, advertising his lecture:

"Ho! All good people far and near Come and see what you can hear."

MAUDLYN.

Honorable Mention

How about a word regarding some of the patriotic white collar girls working in war plants. My attention has been attracted particularly to one who puts in 48 hours as a stenographer in a south side war plant and who has made a dozen contributions to the Red Cross blood bank at 5 N. Wabash av. Besides this, she keeps a steady stream of letters going out to a score of service men. Her name is Josephine Zimmer. M. K. W.

Office Jokers

Secretary to the Straw Boss

The Blushing WCG

The WCG who can, who does, and who will continue to blush still exists. My boss says that as long as I have a figure and continue to blush, what does it matter if I cannot tackle mathematical problems and if I do stumble while reading my shorthand notes! ANIGMA.

Background of Magic

A white collar girl background seems odd training for a magician and telepathy artist. Nevertheless, shorthand, typing, and the myriad duties [don't we know it!] of a stenographer comprised the first career of Louise, feminine half of the Mardoni and Louise magic team now playing in town.

Louise, who is married to her partner, was quite content with her secretarial status in downstate Illinois when she met her husband some 17 years ago. However, when she was called on to be a volunteer stooge for a young school teacher giving an amateur magic performance in the school auditorium, it was a case of love at first sleight of hand.

Today, along with her stage career, she still is the family secretary, handling the business correspondence and bank accounts. Her husband, by the way, is a flyer and served as a flight instructor training navy flyers for 18 months during this war. And Louise is one career girl who can cook—she bakes homemade bread like magic.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 6—"Now It Can Be Told," which Louis de Rochemont starts this month, is another "Fighting Lady," but this time it's about the FBI, with the bureau's help, connivance and documents. It's about spy work during this war. Since the FBI works so secretly, no camera has been permitted to record its activities. "Now It Can Be Told" will be made from actual FBI files by actors and FBI men themselves. It will be made in Washington and New York. Only one brief sequence will be done in Hollywood. "The FBI," says de Rochemont, "was at war two years before we went to war with Germany." Charles Booth, Barry Lyndon, and John Monks Jr. worked nine months over 5,500 espionage cases before they were satisfied. Bill Eythe and Lloyd Nolan will be in it, also Signe Hasso. And 20th Century is trying to borrow Mildred Natwick and Lydia Sinclair. It's the first documentary film about spies ever made while war was still on.

Another Down the Drain

Frank Ross hooted when I asked about the rumor that he and Joan Arthur were having another separation. Said he, "where do those things start? We've done pretty well, I think. We've been happily married 13 years—still are." Jean has taken her mother to a sanitarium in Knoxville, Tenn., and will stay with her for at least three weeks. . . . When I saw Ben Hecht dining with the Howard Hawks at Romanoff's, "Scarface" flashed thru my mind 'cause they did that one together. So I thought—they're cooking up another deal. And sure enough, they were talking about one, but it's six months away. . . . That fine actor, Chill Wills, joined location trek on "The Yearling." I didn't think they'd be able to do that one without Chill. I hope this time his scenes won't be left on the cutting room floor. . . . Abbott and Costello's "Return of the Buck Privates," which they'll do with the Andrews Sisters, is an idea thought up by Lou C. and Lou Levy, the girls' manager. . . . Christy Walsh thinks life of John McGraw would make a pretty good movie. It would, but wouldn't Christy Mathewson, to me the greatest pitcher of them all, make a better one? Then, too, Christy's son, who's in the service, might be persuaded to play his father.

They're Never Too Old

Jimmy Melton's mother, who's 70, made her first trip to Los Angeles by plane to hear her son sing. My mother made her first plane trip here when she was 85, and when asked how she liked flying, she said, "O, it's the only way to travel!" She'd never even seen the inside of a plane before she stepped into that one. . . . "That Brennan Girl," written by Adela Rogers St. John, gets a going-over by Doris Anderson for a Republic picture which Al Santell directs. Wonder if Al still uses the cane with the hand on top. . . . Leon Henderson will be back from China any day now. He went over on invitation of Chiang Kai-shek to study inflation over there. . . . Both Margaret Lindsay and Bob Cummings got their first jobs by affecting an English accent. They've done pretty well without it, too. . . . Hal Wallis gives Johnny Farrow a round trip to New York because of the job Johnny did on "You Came Along." . . . Streamlined version of "Flying High," previewed before taking off for the South Pacific, is good. Boys over there will go for Sid Tomack and his new song "Seven Up." . . . Duke Ellington's "I Got Nothin' but the Blues" is being taken on and published by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen. . . . Betty Hutton doesn't shake a single limb when she sings "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" for "The Stork Club."

Thru the Looking Glass

If you're tired of the way your face looks—as who isn't when spring makes its first charming advances?—give some thought to the new pink make-up. It gives your winter weary complexion a brand new look, and a sprightlier and prettier one that blends better with your gay spring bonnet.

There is, for example, a whole make-up ensemble in "pretty pink." It's delectable—a foundation, either cream or liquid; face powder; cream rouge or dry, and a heavenly shade of lipstick, all keyed to a definitely pretty pink.

Don't think for a minute, just because all these are keyed to pink, that you're going to look like a pale beet, all flushed and flamboyant of face. You'll just look radiant and rested and a wee bit younger than you did before.

We tried this pretty pink one morning when the sun was shining and the old complexion definitely wasn't. We were a little scared at first, as most women are, because we shared the widespread illusion that cream tinted complexions are what most women ought to have. The definitely rosy, or pink, foundation goes on softly as a cloud and it's suggestion of color is just as soft. Powder, in the pale, heavenly shade ever so slightly suffused with a faint pinky glow, goes over this—and the effect is marvelous. You don't look red nosed, as you might fear, or feverish. You look as tho you'd just stepped from a bandbox, glowing and tidy. The look lingers, too, if you use the rouge and lipstick to match!

This new make-up shade, delicate as it is, does make a difference in the way your face looks. But it's an improvement, nine times out of 10, especially with spring costume colors.

Journey Underground

M. Pelerin had come back to eat with the Maurices, and every one was sitting around the kitchen table. They said they had just been talking of our being on the train, and wondering if we had had any trouble.

After we had explained the difficulties, Mme. Maurice never expressed any discontent at having to put up with us for another week at least. She had had a lot of extra work because of us. In order to cause us no embarrassment she had admitted this only when she confessed that she would never take any more aviators for so long a time as we had stayed. She might take another one, but as she was lame, two at a time was a little too much.

They had taken all the things we had left to the basement, and had completely torn up our, or rather their, room, thinking that tomorrow it could be made ready for them to move into again. Louis had taken his radio back home, and in all, during the three hours that we had been away, many other arrangements had been made to return the house to normal.

Madame was really distressed at the fact that she had nothing more to eat in the house that night, but we were so tired that we did not care. There was a little soup left, which with more water, some bread, and a few chestnuts made up our meal.

The next morning life started again just as it had been before, with the exception of the radio. My little breakfast at 10 o'clock hardly seemed complete without the "London Calling Europe" and the "Voice of America" programs, but this loss was much worse for Herk. We had both given up any immediate hope of leaving soon, and felt that looking forward to our departure was a disillusioning pastime. Herk was a little more pessimistic about the whole affair than I, but neither of us could feel any confidence in the statements of Mme. Andre or M Pelerin when they said it would be soon.

I thought that giving Herk some French lessons was rather a good idea. I should have started long before, but I had always believed we would be there only a week more, and that a week of French would not really do any good.

For some one who had not done any teaching, Herk was not exactly the person to start with. He was quite interested during the lesson itself, but even with all his spare time he never really seemed to do any studying, and as a result he made little progress.

Every new lesson had to be started with a complete review of the last with almost the same thoroness as the first time.

Herk's nonacceptance of foreign things did not help either — such French idioms as "J'ai trois ans," completely baffled the boy. "But I don't say 'I have three years —, I say 'I am 3 years old,'" he protested.

At first I tried to explain the peculiarities of the language, but eventually adopted an authoritarian policy of stating flatly that an idiom was an idiom, and that was that.

Herk did learn a little, not much, but a little. The Maurices were, of course, very pleased to discover that Herk had begun his French lessons, and they helped him by demanding the names of things and forcing him to construct single sentences at the dinner table.

I tried to be very affable [with M. Pelerin] and assured him we realized there were difficulties, but he had promised them to me for three weeks, and in that period it should have been possible for some one to have brought them. He again repeated that they were coming. About a week later, when we were out on one of our evening strolls, I very casually asked once more. This third request brought a rather heated retort. "Mme. Andre is very busy, you know, and I have been, too. We have better things to do than look for English books."

Dealing with this subject irritated me so much that I was about to abandon my efforts, but Herk was growing more desperately inactive and dreamy each day, so the next time he came to dinner, I pressed the point once more.

This time he reacted almost violently, and practically shouted, "You are the most unreasonable American we have yet had."

While I was most disinclined to argue at the Maurices' dinner table, I could not allow this unjust statement to pass without making some defense. I was so angry and upset that I forgot my fluent French and could only sputter incoherent and ineffective phrases. Madame supported my case by saying, "He only wants them for Herk, not for himself." That was the last time I had to ask, however, for when he appeared the next time he had the books.

Saturday night always seemed to be the worst night of the week to spend in our semi-prison.

Both Herk and I felt more strongly than ever before that this was a night on which one should have a change of scenery, and the fact that we were in a city which had once been so gay and still was enjoyable, made us always rather more restive than usual.

This particular Saturday evening seemed more than difficult to endure, for Madame, le Pere, and la Grandmere had all gone into town to see a new play. It was called the Honorable Mr. Pepys—I had read all the reviews in Candida for the title had made me curious. A play with a name so English in Paris during the occupation seemed rather odd to me. I should never have expected Pepys. The reviews had been good. How I should have loved to see it.

Michiline and Louis were coming over to keep us company until the family returned. Michiline was to cook our dinner for us. She arrived about 5:00, just as the family was leaving, bringing extra sugar, butter, and eggs with which to make a cake.

Michiline made the cake with such ease that I thought I could easily learn this technique so that I might one day be of value in the kitchen. But upon hearing the complicated explanation and trying to translate it into English I became discouraged.

Louis soon came in, and Michiline ordered us out of the kitchen into the dining room where Louis told me of the day's events.

The war news he brought this evening had a personal element in it for all of us. The patriots had sabotaged the electric station that supplied his meat packing house with power, and the abattoir could operate only three days next week. For us this meant less food, and that Louis would lose three days' pay. This did not seem quite fair, but he said it was the ordinary procedure in French factories. We listened to the news and by the time it had finished dinner was ready.

It soon became evident that Michiline's interest in cooking had never wavered once that evening, for everything placed on the table was most delicious. The tasty cream soup was followed by tomatoes stuffed with creamed mushrooms, pomme de terre puree, and excellent green beans well covered with melted butter. Louis treated us to some of le Pere's best wine, which made the dinner complete.

Just as we were about to start on the cake there was a knocking at the door. At first I was startled, and it was not until Michiline had led the people into the passageway and I heard M. Pelerin's voice that this anxiety abated. However, there were more people than M. Pelerin, and they, together with Louis and Michiline, stayed in the vestibule for several minutes talking, sometimes in a quiet tone, and at others with excitement or with laughter.

Eventually M. Pelerin tired of standing in the hall and led the group into the kitchen. We quickly closed the dining room door, thinking that he might have brought some one in without realizing that we were there. He saw the door closed, and said loudly, "Don't be afraid, Claud, it is only I and not the Gestapo."

As I opened the door, he continued, "Claud, you are always afraid—there is nothing to be afraid of. We have brought some friends to see you."

I felt rather irritated at this admonition about being afraid, and even more so about meeting some more people who had no need to know that we were here. A boy and a girl followed M. Pelerin into the room. The boy was large and husky, and looked like a worker. The girl had black hair and dark skin, and was not very good looking. The boy appeared to be very nervous and worried, and the girl alternated between laughing nervously and being depressed. Michiline directed us all back into the dining room, where we settled down to cut the cake and have a long talk.

THE QUESTION

WHERE ASKED

Hotel Sherman.

THE ANSWERS

Mrs. Joseph Weiss, millinery clerk, 1327 S. Lawndale av.—Today is my wedding anniversary and I remember it as well as I did five years ago. It was raining—simply pouring. I was afraid no one would come to my wedding. I couldn't believe I was getting married—was this some one else or was it me? It was like a dream to me.

Mrs. Richard C. Fast, housewife, Princeville—We were married in Virginia under a dogwood tree. I had to walk from the house to the tree. I kept feeling that I was going to collapse. I noticed the maid of honor was in the same state and I became concerned about her. She virtually fell in my arms when it was over.

Mrs. Marion P. Lawton, student nurse, Fresno, Cal.—My main thoughts were, "Am I doing the right thing? Will I remember my lines?" We were married away from home and a friend of my husband insisted that we have the wedding at his home. Everything turned out better than I expected and I really was quite calm.

Mrs. Edward L. Wright, city treasurer, Benton—Few friends had been invited to my wedding. The church looked empty when I started down the aisle. I noticed every one was crying. This upset me. I had on such high heels that it was hard to walk. All I could think of was that I was getting married.

Mrs. Arthur Young, sales executive, 1908 Wesley av., Berwyn—Just before the wedding I had a thousand things on my mind all at once. I was so nervous I was trembling and that made me all the more upset because I kept wondering if it was noticeable. I also was anxious to see how the pictures we planned to take would turn out.

Smart Parents Do Not Accent Child's Defects

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"But there's only two weeks' difference in their ages! Just look how much taller Elsie is than Carol; how much straighter she holds herself," said one aunt.

"You'd never think they were related in any way," said still a third. "And it's strange because Carol's mother and Elsie's father resemble each other so strongly you would think their children would have some of the same physical characteristics. . . ."

Altho they may never speak of it, some children suffer tortures from some peculiarity of height, teeth, or thinness. They are sensitively aware of their defects without any one discussing them. Why, then, are adults so cruelly careless as to add to this unhappiness?

Happily, there are some children who don't worry about their looks. If they are too tall or too short, too fat or too thin, have too long or too short a nose, it's all the same to them.

Even so, it's just as well not to dwell upon any peculiarity. And certainly with the other type of children it is very bad. Their small points of differentness come to have undue importance to them. They worry, even brood, over it. It frequently destroys their confidence in themselves and gives them a feeling of inferiority. Unnoticed, vocally, by others it may eventually lose all importance to the child, which is the result we want. The less a person thinks of his own defects the less the world thinks of them. Almost everything that you ignore other people will, also.

This is not simple to accomplish, I grant you. Relatives will talk about the children's looks, whether it be coloring, height, girth, or their peculiarities in general. You can't entirely prevent it. What other children may say can't be governed very much. But aside from these two, parents can control the conversation to a great extent by not ever starting any discussions about a child's peculiarities before him. And, when others do so, by letting the matter drop or by quickly changing the subject.

Exchange with Porter in Letters Disclosed

Washington, D. C., April 6 [Special]—Charges and counter-charges in the controversy between Paul Porter, chairman of the federal communications commission, and E. F. McDonald Jr., president of the Zenith Radio corporation, over the proper allocations for frequency modulation [FM] were made public today when Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.], chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, released the text of two letters. One was addressed to Wheeler by Porter on March 12, the other by McDonald on March 26.

The FCC, in a report on post-war radio frequency allocation issued in January, proposed that FM broadcasting be given a new space in the radio spectrum, which is the entire field of wave lengths. The commission proposed moving FM from its 42-50 megacycle space to the 84-102 megacycle space because it said, atmospheric interference in the lower field would be severe enough to impair the utility of FM. MacDonald later proposed as a "compromise," that the new allocations be made from 46 megacycles upward to 70 megacycles.

Attack by MacDonald

McDonald, previous to his letter to Wheeler, had issued a statement attacking the FCC proposal to move FM from 42-50 megacycles to 84-102 megacycles on the grounds that the new area was untried and unproved.

Porter in his letter charged that McDonald carried on his opposition to the proposed assignments for FM by way of "mimeographed statements without possibility of cross-examination by other parties or the commission." Porter said that McDonald was no authority on radio wave propagation. McDonald replied that his objections had been entered before the FCC by his chief engineer, J. E. Brown.

Porter indicated that there was general satisfaction with the FM proposals. He did not mention that the Frequency Modulation Broadcasters, Inc., the association of FM interests, opposed the upward shift.

Cites Experts' Testimony

Porter said McDonald's proposal that the allocation be made from 46 megacycles to 70 megacycles "would not guarantee the interference-free FM service listeners have a right to expect."

McDonald reminded Wheeler that seven of the eight radio wave experts had testified that "moving FM from its present position was unnecessary and undesirable" and that his suggestion of 46-70 megacycles represented a "compromise to satisfy everybody and not disturb the future of FM."

Responding to McDonald's assertion that General Electric and Stromberg Carlson also opposed the FM shift, Porter noted that Philco, Hallicrafters, Motorola "and other manufacturers favor the change."

Says They Lack Experience

McDonald countered that Hallicrafters and Motorola have had no experience in building home FM receivers for the public.

McDonald said the FCC had been misled by "frivolous" suggestions that inexpensive converters would salvage FM receivers affected by the proposed change.

"Wide experience over the years with converters has shown that the public will not accept and use them," McDonald said.

Robber Returns $12,000 in War Bonds, Keeps Cash

Two gunmen held up the office of the Equity Management corporation, 1432 W. 79th st., and stole $470 in cash and $12,000 in war bonds March 30. The bonds belonged to John A. Funk, 7725 S. Hermitage av., manager. Yesterday an unidentified man telephoned Marvin O'Brien, president of the corporation, and said he would "find something interesting in the alley at the rear of the office." O'Brien found the $12,000 in bonds.

April 6, 1945.

FOX squirrels and gray squirrels have found the natural woodlots on the Wheaton farm so conducive to the better life that they have become an annual nuisance. Each year the farm losses from squirrel depredations can be counted in bushels of field corn, as well as sweet corn damaged on the stalk and carried to the bushtails' banquet tables.

Dr. Lee Yeager, forester of the Illinois natural history survey, accompanied us on a walk thru two of the woodlots this week, and commented: "These woodlots have almost every advantageous condition for squirrels, with almost no detriments for them. No hunting has been permitted, the woods are left in natural condition, dens are plentiful, there are no predators that seriously affect squirrels, food is abundant, and the woodlots are protected from fires."

Migrant Bushtails

Dr. Yeager estimated the farm's squirrel population to be about 1½ animals to the acre in the spring breeding season, about 2 to 2¼ animals to the acre in the fall season, after the young have been added and migrant squirrels have come in from near-by farms to feast.

Dr. Yeager gave two suggestions for reducing the squirrel damage to farm crops: The first is the obvious one of shooting or trapping the excess animals each season, thereby eliminating one-third to one-half of the fall population. This method of "harvesting" the excess squirrels would make hunters the predators to replace the martens, fishers, and other furbearers that formerly served to control the squirrel population.

Mulberry Diet

The second suggestion made by Dr. Yeager for controling squirrel damage was that of planting additional mulberry trees along the edges of the farm woodlots. In late June and July, the bushtails look for succulent food, and their trail leads to the corn fields because the corn is soft and juicy at that time. Dr. Yeager says plantings of mulberry in the woodlots would give the squirrels the kind of food they need at that season, therefore tend to keep them in the woodlots instead of the corn fields.

★ The GARDEN ★

SOIL moisture conditions this season are different from the conditions noted both last spring and in 1943. In the two previous years, numerous spring rains forced most gardeners to delay planting until late April or May. This year there have been fewer spring rains, and the rains that have fallen have been readily absorbed by soils left dry as a result of the drouth last fall.

This fast absorption of spring rainfall results in fast drying of the topsoil. Consequently, gardeners who do not keep a close watch on their plot may delay spading and planting longer than is necessary.

A gardener readily can tell if his ground is workable by the way it turns during spading. If the soil remains in a solid, moist mass when turned, it is too wet to be worked. If it crumbles when turned, it can safely be worked and planted.

CHRYSLER SAYS UNION TRIES TO BEFOG VET ISSUE

The Chrysler corporation yesterday charged CIO Automobile Workers' union officials with attempting to confuse Dodge Chicago employes and the public in answer to claims of unionists Thursday night that "the corporation was to blame for the discharges of war veterans" at the huge plant, where engines for B-29 Super Fortresses are made in volume.

Members of the newly formed United Veterans of World War II, which is made up of the bulk of 3,700 ex-service men of this war employed at the plant, met Thursday night and voted to invite a representative of the Chrysler corporation to their next meeting to explain the company's plan for seniority for veterans, before they agree to back the union's proposal.

"None of the 50 veterans laid off at the Dodge Chicago plant would have been separated from his job if the union had accepted the company's proposal," the company said yesterday. "The layoffs of the veterans were mandatory under the seniority clause in the existing union-company contract."

Savannah Auto Sharers Awarded OPA Citation

An average of 5.3 persons share each automobile driven by workers at the Savannah ordnance depot, the office of price administration said yesterday in awarding its first citation for ride sharing plans in the seven state midwest region. Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, said the OPA considers four per car excellent, and that the average for all war plants is slightly more than three and one-half.

DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Rudolph A. Frank, 55, suffered a fatal heart attack yesterday in the rear of 437 S. Halsted st. Police started a search for relatives.

STEEL MAKERS WARNED: WORK OR LOSE JOBS

Determined to carry out its "moral and patriotic duty to fill its war orders for sheet steel," the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation issued a warning yesterday that workers on the pickling lines at the Gary sheet and tin mill who engage in slowdowns will be dismissed and others will be found to do their work.

The company offered to arbitrate immediately the dispute over a new work schedule, which has caused the slowdowns at the plant, if the United Steelworkers' union [CIO] would submit a grievance under its contract with the company.

Disciplinary layoffs of employes, meted out by the company for their failure to maintain the work rate, have resulted in the reported loss of 40,074 tons of sheet steel and tinplate needed for the production of war materials, since the slowdowns began March 11. The slowdowns caused 826 employes to be out of work yesterday.

E.J. Ader, Convicted of Fraud, Retaken

Sought for 22 years as a prison fugitive in a search that extended to the capitals of Europe, Edward J. Ader, 65, former Chicago attorney, was held last night by agents of the federal bureau of investigation in New York, Spencer J. Drayton, Chicago FBI chief, reported.

Edward J. Ader

Ader had begun a seven year federal prison term in 1923 for defrauding investors of the defunct Consumers' Packing company of more than $500,000 thru the sale of worthless stock, when he fled from a prison guard in the office of his brother, Atty. William F. Ader, on the 12th floor at 11 S. La Salle st.

The convicted lawyer's prison term had begun in March, 1923, at Leavenworth penitentiary, but he was brought back to Chicago in September to testify in the government's effort to discover assets of the company.

Escapes with Secretary.

When the promoter had completed his testimony, he asked his guard for permission to visit his brother. At the latter's office he said he was going to the washroom, and walked away. With him went his former secretary, Goldie Skolnik, who had been sentenced to six months in county jail for her part in the fraud. She later became Ader's wife.

Since his flight from Chicago, Ader disclosed, he had been in Berlin, Paris, London, and other European cities.

Arrested on West Coast.

Drayton said that Ader then secretly returned to the United States, where he established several businesses, usually under the name of Edwin A. Castle. Later he was arrested in Los Angeles, Cal., for receiving stamps stolen from a collector, but jumped his bond before FBI agents could seize him.

FBI agents, Drayton said, next traced Ader to his home in a wealthy New York residential district, where he was living with his wife, his former secretary.

SLAYER SERVING 99 YEAR TERM DIES IN PRISON

Joseph Fess, 39, who was serving a 99 year prison term for the insurance murder of George Carl, a grocer, died yesterday in Stateville penitentiary of a heart ailment. Fess was sent to prison in 1933 after he pleaded guilty. Carl's widow, Vera, was sentenced to 14 years in prison for her part in the plot. Her sweetheart, John Milosec, and her brother, Ivan Grilec, were sentenced to life imprisonment.

U. OF I. TRUSTEES BACK $16,169,000 BUILDING PLANS

A $16,169,000 building program for the next two years, including a 2 million dollar sports palace and a 1½ million dollar physics research laboratory, was approved yesterday by the University of Illinois board of trustees, meeting in the University club.

The board also approved a biennial operating budget of $25,627,512, of which $19,107,250 will come from state tax funds. The balance will be provided by fees and other university revenue and by federal grants.

Both the building and operating budgets have been approved by Gov. Green and the state budgetary commission. The figures represented compromises reached between the commission and university officials, after the university had reduced its original estimate of the operating budget by $4,250,775. The trustees also succeeded in restoring to the building program four laboratories which had been left off the building program in favor of the sports palace.

The university's operating budget is part of the regular state biennial budget now before the legislature and the building program will be included in an omnibus appropriation bill, proposing to take the money from the state's surplus.

University Graduate Sentenced for Theft

Peter C. Vermeulen, 29, who said he took to crime because he believed he was going blind as the result of an automobile accident, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Gibson E. Gorman in Felony court to 60 days in county jail for stealing two typewriters from the University of Chicago. Vermeulen said he was a graduate of Columbia university.

BY EDWARD BURNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Fort Knox, Ky., April 6—Two homers by Paul Gillespie, which accounted for three of four runs which had the Cubs possessed of a 4 to 1 lead going into the latter half of the eighth inning, were not sufficient to withstand a late attack on Pitcher Mack Stewart today. The Reds won, 5 to 4, because they tied the score with three runs in the eighth and took the decision on Dick Sipek's homer after two Cincies had fanned in the ninth.

Sipek is a 22 year old Chicagoan who played with Birmingham last year and did not get into the game until he was sent to second to run for Eric Tipton in the eighth inning uprising.

Soldiers Have Holiday

Until the blowup, the Cubs appeared to be the class of the show put on for 7,000 soldiers at this great army post. Their defense was sparkling at times and the slugging of Gillespie, combined with some effective slashing by Andy Pafko and Don Johnson, had the Cubs in front, 1 to 0, 2 to 0, 2 to 1, and 4 to 1, at the expense of Walter Beck. Then, after Beck went away, Frank Dasso, another Chicago boy, saw to it that the Cubs got only one single, by Lennie Merullo.

After taking a tank ride, the teams went to Louisville, where tomorrow the Cubs will play a double header, the first game with the Louisville Colonels and the second with the Reds. Paul Derringer, George Hennessey, Bob Chipman, and Hank Wyse are slated to pitch for the Cubs in this first exhibition double header in many years.

George Is Pretty Good

The only run the Reds made during George Woodend's four inning mound tenancy came in the fourth inning and was unearned. Previously a sharp Cub defense had nullified a double by Al Libke in the first inning and Al Lakeman had been unable to get off second after opening the third inning with a double. The fourth inning started with Libke popping to Johnson. Then singles by Frank McCormick and Steve Mesner and a pass to Woody Williams loaded the bases. Hack then fumbled Walter Flager's looper which was not quit high enough to be adjudged an infield fly. McCormick scored on the misplay, whereupon the Cub infield ripped off its second snappy double play, this one going Roy Hughes to Johnson to Phil Cavarretta.

With the Cubs leading, 2 to 1, Stewart took over at the start of the Reds' fifth and a spectacular throw by Andy Pafko lifted him out of a potential jam. After two were out in the fifth, Tipton walked and Libke slammed a single to right center. Pafko snatched it nicely and got Tipton at third on a perfect throw to Hack.

The Reds Break Thru

Stewart retired the Reds in order in the sixth and seventh innings, but the Cincies broke thru in the eighth. Dain Clay led off with a double to left and pulled up at third on Tipton's single to center. Libke fouled to Cavarretta and McCormick popped to Johnson. Mesner's dribble barely evaded Johnson for a scratch single, Clay scoring. Sipek went to second to run for Tipton, then Williams walked, loading the bases. Flager singled to right, Sipek and Mesner scoring the tying runs. Joe Just lined to Hack.

ST. PHILIP, SENN ARE RIVALS FOR SENIOR CROWN

Marshall and Leo Junior Finalists

For City Honors

PLACE—Chicago Stadium, 1800 W. Madison.

TEAMS—Marshall and Senn High schools, junior and senior champions of City league, against Leo and St. Philip High schools, junior and senior champions of Catholic league.

TIME—First game, Marshall vs. Leo, at 8 o'clock tonight. [Doors open at 6:30 p. m.]

SPONSOR—Mayor Edward J. Kelly. Proceeds of contest donated to Chicago Service Men's Centers.

ATTENDANCE—Estimated, 13,500.

TICKETS—Five hundred reserved seats on sale at $2.50. General admission tickets: adults, $1.25; students, 75 cents. Tickets go on sale at Chicago Stadium at 1:30 p. m.

High school basketball's lengthy season officially will be concluded tonight in Chicago Stadium when four teams—champions of the Catholic and City leagues—meet to decide the Chicago senior and junior prep championships.

At 8 o'clock, Referee Ike Craig will toss up the ball between Centers Pat McGinnis of Leo and Jerry Berman of Marshall to open play in the junior contest between Leo's Lions, of the Catholic league, and undefeated Marshall, only repeat performer on the program of the third annual show.

Fifteen minutes after the final gun on the junior contest, the senior championship battle will start, with the St. Philip Gaels meeting Senn High school. The Gaels are in the role of favorites, and it would take an upset victory by Senn to give the public schools their first senior victory in the series.

Marshall Has Fine Record

Marshall, which has registered 117 victories in 119 contests, is the favorite in the junior contest, and registered the only public school triumph in the interleague series when it beat Mount Carmel in 1943. Since then, the parochial schools have monopolized play, with the Mount Carmel senior five defeating Kelvyn Park in 1943, and South Shore last season. Weber's Red Horde defeated Marshall in the 1944 junior game.

The double header is sponsored by Mayor Kelly, and the receipts, from an estimated attendance of 13,500, will be distributed among the Chicago Service Men's centers. The attendance will be the largest to witness any one high school basketball session in the state this season.

Bands, R. O. T. C. on Program

Bands from Leo and St. Philip will provide music and at 7:45 there will be a demonstration by R. O. T. C. platoons from Senn and Marshall.

Between halves of the junior contest a demonstration of physical fitness activities will be given by boys from Calumet High school, under the direction of John Boyle and John Ivers. The physical fitness demonstration will continue at the half of the senior game, when fencing, wrestling, and tumbling exhibitions will be given by teams from Lane, Tilden, and Lindblom.

Senn Captain Out

Senn's hopes for victory were darkened somewhat last night when it was announced that Capt. Bob David, who was taken ill with scarlet fever shortly after Senn played in the state tournament in Champaign last month, would not play.

This afternoon coaches of both leagues will be guests at a basketball clinic in the Stadium.

Detroit, Mich., April 6 (AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs, baffling the Red Wings with a tight defense, beat Detroit, 1 to 0, in the first game of the Stanley cup play-off before 13,046 tonight.

Schriner burst out of the midst of a Red Wing rush with the puck, and outsped two Detroit pursuers on a 140 foot dash before he feinted Young Harry Lumley to the near side of the net and from 10 feet away rapped the puck safely into the far corner.

Cards List Trippi No. 1 Choice in Draft; Bears Pick Don Lund

BY EDWARD PRELL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, April 6—The National Football league's annual player draft, which since 1941 has been a manifestation of what the teams want, rather than what they expect to get, finally got under way in the late afternoon hours today.

The Chicago Cardinals, last in the league in 1945, were honored with getting the pick of the field just as they were last April when they laid negotiating claims to Pat Harder, Wisconsin's great half back now in the marines. This afternoon the Cardinals selected Charles Trippi, the star half back from Georgia, who last season played for the 3d air force team in North Carolina.

Steelers Draft a Packer!

First choice of the Chicago Bears, who were seventh to reach into the college grab bag, was Don Lund, Michigan half back.

The most spectacular choice, however, was that of the Pittsburgh Steelers who laid claim to Paul Duhart, a freshman left half back in 1944 with the Green Bay Packers. The Duhart incident had been reviewed earlier in the day and what to do with the Florida boy and others in the same category had delayed the draft machinery.

Eligible for Draft and Sale

Duhart, honorably discharged after 22 months in the army, was a member of the University of Florida class which will be graduated next June. However, last year Paul chose to play professional football and was signed by the Packers. He was one of four or five in the same category who played last year in the National league.

Most of the morning was taken up in sharp debate on whether players in Duhart's particular class would be eligible for the draft. In the end it was decided that these boys' names would go on the board, but that a rider would be attached to the league rule making it a violation for a league team to sell or trade its No. 1 and No. 2 draft choices until they had played a year with it.

Backs Are Popular

According to the amendment, players in Duhart's category may be traded back to their original pro league team. Thus the Packers can negotiate to obtain Duhart by trade or purchase. No matter what happens Duhart will play with the

ZAVALA STOPPED BY TONY JANIRO IN 4TH ROUND

New York, April 6 (AP)—Tony Janiro, the Youngstown [O.] lightweight who has been dubbed the new Canzoneri, scored a fourth round technical knockout over Humberto Zavala, Mexico City, tonight for his 36th victory in 37 professional starts.

Janiro, weighing 140 pounds to Zavala's 137¾, opened the cut with a hard right in the second round. Zavala fought back to cut Tony's forehead. Blood flowed freely from both fighters during the third and fourth rounds of the scheduled eight round windup.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Terre Haute, Ind., April 6—Detroit's Tigers have become shareholders in the White Sox training premises and from now on the two teams will devote themselves to final exams prior to the 1945 opener April 17. They'll get one test tomorrow in the opener of a four game series and the indications are that the newly arrived co-tenants expect to do something drastic about the 8 to 0 trimming handed them by James Dykes' boys on George field a few days back.

In that affair, the Tigers, remembering the Sox are seventh place hangovers from 1944, weren't particular about who did their work. Tomorrow, at least as promised by their boss, Steve O'Neill, they will be represented by what will closely resemble their eventual regular lineup, even unto Hal Newhouser, the left hander who sports 29 victories as proof he made a noteworthy contribution to Detroit's pennant bid.

Sox Use Their Best

Dykes' preparation for the series include not only the best lineup he feels he can put together at this time, but also a switch from his scheme of employing three pitchers per exhibition. From now on, including the four affairs scheduled with the Cubs in Chicago, the daily pitching will be shared by two men. That is, unless one of the pair of both should suffer what is known as pinned back ears, in which event a helper will be summoned.

Tomorrow's pair chosen to face Newhouser and whoever is picked to succeed him will be the well-aged Thornton Lee and Johnny Johnson, the ex-Yankee lefty, who may be asked to become the 1945 Gordon Maltzberger, if he isn't needed as a starter during the season. Because Lee has been slightly indisposed, he will be permitted to stick only four innings, altho the Tigers may indicate they wish him retired in shorter time. Dykes' eagerness to get Lee into the swing of things might mean the old timer still is the manager's choice for the opening day job in Cleveland.

It's Bill and Orv Tomorrow

Bill Dietrich, who did three innings against the Tigers last Wednesday, and Orval Grove will be dropped into Sunday's combat. They will be honored by drawing as an opponent Paul [Dizzy] Trout, winner of 27 games last season, and a local product. All the big and little Trouts for miles around have been invited to attend Dizzy's version of "home town boy makes good."

Today's workout, the last of a routine nature, was devoted mainly to another batting session. Only those with infirmities took the drill lightly. There are only two of these, one being Oris Hockett, ex-Indian, who thinks, however, his ailing left leg will be sufficiently sound to permit him to lend a hand tomorrow as center fielder.

Dr. John Davis, Cubs Physician 25 Years, Dies

Dr. J. F. Davis

Dr. John F. Davis, 69, well known to Chicago sports fans as the Cubs' club physician for 25 years, died late yesterday afternoon in Illinois Masonic hospital. He had suffered a heart attack in the morning while listening to the radio in his home, 2738 N. Sheffield av. He was taken to the hospital in a fire department ambulance. Placed under an oxygen tent, he rallied momentarily but lapsed again in the afternoon.

Dr. Davis, in addition to being prominent in sports thru his long association with the Cubs and, more recently, with the Bears football team, was a leader in the field of medicine also. He was a member of the attending staff of Illinois Masonic hospital, surgeon for the Rapid Transit Lines and for several industrial plants. He was an active Mason, a veteran of World War I., and had served as commander of his American Legion post.

He was born Feb. 29, 1876, and was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1910. He is survived by his widow, Marguerite, and one son, Lt. Elza Davis, stationed at Fort Knox. The latter flew to Chicago last night. The body was taken to the funeral parlor at 929 W. Belmont av.

WISCONSIN NINE BEATS IOWA, 4-3, IN BIG 9 TRIUMPH

Iowa City, Ia., April 6 [Special]—A ninth inning rally by Iowa fell one run short and Wisconsin defeated the Hawkeyes in the opening baseball game of the Big Nine conference season, 4 to 3, today.

Gene Jaroch, the Badger pitcher, was in trouble only twice as he struck out 13, walked four, and yielded only four hits. Leading the Wisconsin attack was Orvell Zimmerman, second baseman, who hit safely in four trips to the plate and drove in the first three runs.

HASLANGER DIES AFTER ELECTION TO A. B. C. OFFICE

Milwaukee, Wis., April 6 [Special]—Only a few hours after he had been promoted to the fifth vice presidency of the American Bowling congress at the organization's annual board of directors meeting today, Carl Haslanger, 59, South Bend, Ind., died of a heart attack. He collapsed at the Milwaukee railroad station as he was about to board a train for Chicago.

The directors, besides advancing Haslanger another notch toward the congress' presidency, elected to the president's chair Gerhard S. Germann, Whitesboro, N. Y., to succeed Elmer Irwin, San Francisco.

CARDINALS PICK CHARLEY TRIPPI IN PROS' DRAFT

Nine of the 11 first choices in the draft are backs. Two Notre Dame stars of other years were selected. The Detroit Lions laid claim to Frank Szymanski, a center, while the Philadelphia Eagles obtained negotiating rights on John Yonakor, giant Irish end who starred in the 1944 All-Star game in Evanston.

Green Bay selected Walter Schlinkman, a full back from Texas Tech. This was in the nature of a sleeper and it was suspected perhaps the Packers know the young man will be available. The Cards, too, must know something about Trippi, who was hospitalized more than a year ago after entering the service. Cleveland's first choice was Elroy Hirsch of Wisconsin fame.

The draft ceremony, with each club naming 30 players, as in the last two years, lasted well into the evening, after which the club owners in the first show of unanimity agreed to adjourn until tomorrow morning.

This delayed official action on the status of the homeless Brooklyn Tigers, who are determined to move their franchise into Yankee stadium. Tom Gallery, the general manager of the Tigers, thus had a good night's sleep before putting his case before his colleagues. There still was strong evidence that the Giants, who operate in the near-by Polo Grounds, will drive a hard bargain. Meanwhile Gallery stood his ground, insisting that his threat to secede and join the newly organized All-America conference is not an idle bluff.

May Run Overtime.

At the snail's pace the magnates progressed today, this one problem conceivably could eat up most of tomorrow's time, still leaving for consideration the makeup of the league in 1945, the playing schedule, and many other matters. The meeting is supposed to end Sunday, but indications tonight were that it may run into Monday.

Charley Bidwill, owner of the Cardinals, revealed that he has signed Jack Tavener, Indiana center who was selected in last year's draft. A second Cardinal center is Marshall Robnett. The Bears, who have lost their regular pivotman, Bulldog Turner, are making overtures for Tavener. Among the Bears' first 10 picks were two centers, Forest Masterson of Iowa and William Maypher of Oregon. Both are available for 1945, as are all the first eight on the Bears' list. The Cards' second, third, fourth, and fifth choices likewise are civilians.

Steelers Name Coach

Bert Bell, coowner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, said that if his team plays as a single unit next fall, Jim Leonard, former Notre Dame star, will be his coach.

Strong pressure to keep the draft drawings a secret finally was overridden, with George Preston Marshall of the Redskins leading the attack.

CARDINALS—Charles Trippi, half back, Georgia; Paul Collins, half back, Missouri; Walter Watt, half back, University of Miami [Fla.]; Robert Dobelstein, guard, Tennessee; Floyd Chronister, end, Texas Christian; Corwin Clatt, half back, Notre Dame; Ziggy Czarobski, tackle, Notre Dame; John Harrington, end, Marquette; Eugene Meeks, half back, Kentucky; Bill Huber, end, Notre Dame; Hailey Heard, tackle, Louisiana State; Bob Cowan, half back, Indiana; Buddy Super, half back, Duke; Solon Burnett, tackle, Southwestern; Gordon Carves, half back, Duke.

Nelson Totals 133 to Lead Atlanta Field

Atlanta, Ga., April 6 (AP)—Byron Nelson, the Texan who migrated to Toledo, O., took a six stroke lead over the field in the $10,000 Red Cross benefit golf tournament today as he added a par 69 to yesterday's 64 for a 133 total at the half way mark.

Sammy Byrd of Detroit, the former New York Yankee outfielder, slipped into second place with the best round of the day, a four under par 65 which gave him 139.

Orville White, Winston-Salem, N. C., pro, shot his second straight 70 to land in third place. Three players whose winnings on the winter circuit have been scanty were in a deadlock for the next spot with 141s. They were Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, Pa.; Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., and Joe Zarhardt, Morristown, Pa.

Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Jug McSpaden of Sanford, Me., runner-up to Nelson after the first round, fell behind today. Snead, after going out in a ragged 39, recovered with a 34 coming in, which gave him a two day total of 142. McSpaden's 75 landed him in the 144 bracket with several others.

Jimmy Hines of Amsterdam, N. Y., was tied with Snead at 142. He got a 69 today. Ed Furgol, Hinsdale, Ill., also had a 142 to lead the amateurs.

PROMOTERS AIR VIEWS ON BILL TO BAN BOXING

BY FRANK MASTRO

The Illinois athletic commission last night turned its offices in the Steger building over to the Illinois house of representatives' license and miscellany committee to conduct a hearing on a bill to prohibit professional boxing and wrestling bouts until the war ends.

After listening for two hours to testimony of opponents of the measure, introduced in the house last month by Rep. Peter C. Granata [R., Chicago], the committee adjourned until next week when it will listen to arguments in Springfield of proponents of the legislation.

Nelson Heads Committee

Rep. Ragnar G. Nelson [R., Chicago], presided at the meeting as committee chairman. Other members present were Rep. John C. Hruby [D., Chicago], Rep. John D'Arco [D., Chicago], and Rep. James A. Adduci [R., Chicago]. Rep. Otis L. Miller [R., Belleville], fifth member, was unable to attend.

Rep. Adduci definitely is for the bill, he said, before the meeting convened. It is understood Representatives D'Arco and Hruby also favor it.

Clark Misses Meeting

Members of the athletic commission—Chairman Sheldon Clark and Commissioners Lt. Gen. Roy D. Keehn and Harry Scranton—were not present, but were ably represented by Secretary Pete Miller and Inspector Lt. Col. William Troxell.

"At the outset of the war," Miller pointed out, "athletic competition was suspended in England, but after realizing a mistake had been made sports and games were reinstated there at the height of the V-bomb barrage. I think this bill is foolish."

Col. Troxell said boxing is clean and aboveboard as far as the present commission is concerned. "I heard a remark that there are mismatches in this state," Troxell said. "That is not so. Every contest is weighed carefully before being approved by the commission."

Make Money for State

Rep. Adduci asked: "Isn't it true that this commission is operating at a loss to the state?"

"That's not so," retorted Troxell. "Boxing and wrestling are sources of revenue to Illinois. The commission never has operated at a loss."

Irving Schoenwald, co-promoter with Jack Begun of shows in the Stadium and Marigold Gardens, asked for the reason for the bill, to which the committee said it couldn't say since a copy of it wasn't available.

Fred Kohler, co-promoter with Carl Schaller of mat programs in Rainbo Fronton and White City, defended his sport, but it was indicated by Representatives Adduci, Hruby, and D'Arco that they had little or nothing against wrestling.

HOEFLER WINS SWEEPER

A. J. Hoefler with a score of 607 won top prize in the Roosevelt Bowl sweeper last night. Alice Serafin, shooting 623, led the women's scoring.

New York, April 6 (AP)—Gene Rogers of Columbia, holder of the N. C. A. A. 220 and National 440 and 880 yard outdoor titles, sped to a hard earned triumph in the 220 yard free style event tonight in the National A. A. U. men's senior indoor swimming championship meet.

Chicagoan Disqualified

Dave Seibold of Jackson, Mich., representing the Saginaw junior board of commerce, scored an upset when he won the 220 yard breast stroke title by a touch over Bainbridge's defending champion, Joe Verdeur, holder of the 200 meter breast stroke and 300 meter medley championships. Dick Domeraski of the Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, finished third but was disqualified for illegal turns.

Ensign Adolph Kiefer of Bainbridge won the 300 yard individual medley title for the fifth time. Timed in 3:30.4, Adolph beat home his fellow sailor, Joe Verdeur. Kiefer trailed Verdeur by 15 feet at the end of the breast stroke leg, but made up that disadvantage and moved 25 feet in front during the back stroke, finally winning by 50 feet.

The game was slow, with both teams playing cautiously, until Sweeney Schriner's goal at 16:56 of the first period. Thereafter the Red Wings tried to power the puck past McCool but couldn't beat him on what chances they had.

Penalties Are Rare

The only penalties of the game came in the second period and each gave Detroit a man power advantage they failed to turn to advantage. Mel Hill was sent to the box for tripping Jud McAtee early in the period, and at the 17 minute mark Lorne Carr drew a major penalty for high sticking Capt. Bill Hollett of the Wings.

The Wings' best opportunity of the evening came in the final seconds of Carr's absence, when Mud Bruneteau, Carl Liscombe, and Earl Seibert all were pumping shots into a mass of defenders who blocked most of them before they got to McCool.

The teams will play the second game of the best four out of seven series here Sunday night before moving to Toronto for the next two contests.

RENEW BATTLE FOR CONTROL OF KATY RAILROAD

Annual Meeting Recessed Day to Check Proxies

St. Louis, Mo., April 6 (AP)—Efforts of a group of Florida business men to gain control of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas [Katy] railroad will be renewed at tomorrow's second session of the annual stockholders' meeting.

Soon after an opening motion today by E. N. Claughton, Miami theater chain owner, to reduce the number of directors from 15 to nine, President Matthew S. Sloan ordered a recess to count proxies and determine stockholders' eligibility to vote. Claughton said he would press his motion tomorrow.

Claim Majority of Proxies.

Claughton is the Katy's largest individual stockholder and a member of a stockholders' protective committee which contends its members own 25 per cent of the stock and have control of 60 per cent of the proxy votes.

The committee's purpose is to "bring about an adjustment in administration policies to put the road on a paying basis" thru ouster of Sloan if necessary.

Sloan has asserted confidence in his reelection as board chairman and president for the 13th year and reelection of four other directors whose terms expire April 9.

Law May Bar Action.

The committee has nominated five candidates for the board and Claughton's proposal to reduce the number of directors to nine would increase his group's chances for a possible majority at next year's meeting.

Charles Morehead, New York attorney and committee legal adviser, said Missouri statutes under which the road was incorporated may prevent action on such a proposal until it is considered at a board meeting.

WIRE RECORDER FIRM FORMED TO GOVERN LICENSE

The Armour Research Foundation of the Illinois Institute of Technology yesterday announced the formation of the Wire Recorder Development corporation to handle commercial developments of the magnetic wire recorder, invented by Marvin Camras, young physicist of Armour's staff. The new corporation, headed by Lucius Crowell, former Chicago advertising man, will handle matters relating to licensing companies to manufacture the recorder.

Seventeen companies have been licensed to produce the recorders. Nine are licensed to manufacture home recorder sets when materials are released. Current production is used for war.

Other officers of the development corporation, a subsidiary of the foundation, are: vice president, Dr. J. E. Hobson, director of the foundation; secretary and treasurer, Raymond J. Spaeth, treasurer of the institute; assistant secretary-treasurer, William M. Hammond, business manager of the foundation.

ERIE ROAD ASKS ICC APPROVAL OF BIG REFINANCING

Morgan Stanley & Co. offered 250,000 shares of Anderson, Clayton & Co. common stock at $44 a share, and Kidder, Peabody & Co. offered, subject to prior sale to stockholders, 75,000 shares of 4¼ per cent cumulative preferred stock at $105.50 a share and 65,857 shares of common at $21.50 a share.

RETAIL VOLUME STRONG, BUT OFF PRE-EASTER HIGH

New York, April 6 (AP)—Retail volume dropped off from record pre-Easter levels last week, but buying continued strong for most soft goods and seasonal lines, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Volume was 6 to 11 per cent above a year earlier when Easter buying was in the final stage.

"Sales increases this week over last year's final Easter shopping were unusually pronounced, partly because a year ago there was a letdown in volume of taxable items," it said. "The usual markdowns and special sales were limited as scarcities in some lines of merchandise currently were a retarding factor."

DEPENDENCY TEST

In the case of an enlisted man's wife with two children, must the portion of the monthly family allowance contributed by the government be taken into account in determining whether the wife provides more than half the support of her children? This information is desired so she may know whether she may list the children as dependents for income tax purposes.—M. K.

The mother is entitled to a surtax exemption of $500 for each child if she contributes from her own funds more than half of the child's support and the child's taxable gross income is less than $500. In determining whether she provides more than half of the support, however, the government's allowances for the child, but not for the mother herself, must be taken into account.

If the mother's contribution was larger than the government's monthly allowance of $30 for the first child and $20 for the second she would evidently be providing more than half the support and could claim exemption for the children in her tax return and also in her withholding exemption certificate if she is employed.

A recent special ruling of the bureau of internal revenue holds that the nature of the income, whether taxable or nontaxable, has no bearing on the question who provided the major portion of the support. The government's contribution to the family allowance is nontaxable. The $22 portion of the monthly allowance which is deducted from the enlisted man's pay is includible in his gross income and is taxable to him if his income exceeds his exemptions. This portion is regarded as part of the $50 allowance for the wife.

U. S., CANADIAN CUT BACK RULE SET UP BY KRUG

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—WPB Chairman Krug directed that United States war contracts in Canada be cut back after Germany's fall at the same rate as contracts with domestic producers.

The policy is to "prevent criticism and confusion" which Krug said would result if Canada went into civilian goods manufacture ahead of this country and to head off dislocation and unemployment which may result if Canadian plants were shut down before peace time materials and parts became available from the United States.

Ask OPA Ceiling on Fish to Halt Soaring of Prices

Detroit, Mich., April 6 (AP)—W. E. Fitzgerald, district OPA director, said today that his office had recommended price controls on Great Lakes fish because they have become an important item of diet as a substitute for meat during the meat shortage and prices are being pushed to unwarranted heights by the unusual demand.

LIFT SECRECY ON PEACE SHIFT, MAVERICK ASKS

Insists Small Firms Must Be Helped

The "mania" for secrecy that grips Washington, D. C., officials must be ended and planning for industrial reconversion must be done openly, said Maury Maverick, chairman of the Smaller War Plants corporation, yesterday.

Maury Maverick

Speaking before the Executives Club of Chicago in the Hotel Sherman, he said the program for the shift from war to peace time production must be "laid out on the table" for the American people.

"Plans are being made, public and private, national and international, which ought to be made public," Maverick said. "Plans are being made for V-E day. The public is not prepared and should be prepared."

Warns of Depression

He warned that the most severe depression in United States history will result if small business and returning war veterans are not taken care of, explaining that expansion of the economic system and small business is needed for full production and employment.

He presented a three-point program to aid small business after the war, terming it "an umpiring proposition to help us assure free enterprise." The program was:

1. Equity capital must be available to little business.
2. Small business must be given first chance in the readjustment to peace time production.
3. Technical assistance must be provided for business as it is provided for agriculture.

He reiterated that a system of credit insurance, similar to that used by the federal housing authority, should be made available to small business.

Equity Capital Held Essential

"Little business will be stopped dead in its tracks after the war unless it has equity capital," Maverick said. "Interest rates must be low. Under a system of credit insurance most of the risk in small business loans would be transferred to a national insurance pool. This would lower interest rates and put small business on a basis more nearly equal to big business in obtaining capital."

Explaining that more than half a million small businesses have been "lost" since the beginning of the war, Maverick said that "we need those back and at least another half million" to help achieve full production and employment.

"Big business cannot meet the problems of readjustment alone, but little business and big business can, because together they can assure a vigorous, expanding business economy," he said.

Vets Termed Business Hope

Maverick said returning veterans represent the greatest hope for small business in the country's history and that at least one-fourth of the men in the services have indicated a strong wish to establish their own businesses.

The vast amount of research during the war has resulted in many scientific achievements that should be made available to little business in peace time, he said.

Maverick urged that little business be given an adequate opportunity to participate in world trade and said export organizations or pools would aid such an effort.

Coal Strikes Cut U.S. Steel Mill Output

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 6 (AP)—The United States Steel corporation disclosed tonight that because of wildcat soft coal strikes it was closing 37 open hearth furnaces, increasing to 10,000 the number of tons of steel lost daily in its Pittsburgh and Youngstown, O., mills.

The open hearths normally produce about 6,000 tons. The corporation already had closed six Bessemer converters with a capacity of 4,000 tons.

Shut Down Blast Furnaces

The supply of coal en route to United States Steel mills increased 15 per cent during the day, indicating a slight general improvement in the Pennsylvania coal situation as miners and operators awaited Washington action in their contract dispute.

Coal for the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation, Weirton Steel company, Bethlehem Steel company, and Republic Steel corporation remained tied up by strikes.

Asks Help of WLB

Ottumwa, Ia., April 6 (AP)—Three thousand plant and office employes of the John Morrell & Co. meat packing plant remained idle today altho the strike was unauthorized by officials of the CIO United Packinghouse Workers. The war labor board asked immediate end to the strike which it said was delaying meat supplies for the military.

Union members sent the following reply:

"Received your wire. We told the people to go back to work. The membership voted to comply with your wire with this provision: That the company put them back to work status quo prior to dispute and without discrimination until dispute is settled. Membership waiting your decision this matter."

CALL HIGH U. S. OFFICIALS FOR SHIPSHAW QUIZ

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—The senate small business committee announced today the calling of state department, Reconstruction Finance corporation, and WPB officials for a new hearing Tuesday on the government's Shipshaw contract with the Aluminium Company of Canada.

"Sensational charges of negligence in office and exceptionally favorable terms granted the Canadian company by RFC officials have been made in testimony offered the committee," said the committee, and "will be thoroly examined."

CAPEHART BILL WOULD EXTEND PATENT PERIOD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 6—Sen. Capehart [R., Ind.] today introduced a bill which would extend the expiration date of any patent for a period equal to the duration of the war. It was the first piece of legislation introduced by Capehart since he was seated Jan. 3.

He said in an interview that few patent holders have been able to manufacture goods under their patents during the war.

"For example, were the war to end Dec. 7, 1945, and manufacturers were permitted to resume manufacture under their patents, they would lose four years of the life of such patents," he said.

The patent law provides that the life of a patent shall be 17 years.

EXTRA BANKING HELP NECESSARY AT RFC SURPLUS PLANE SALE

New York, April 6 [Special]—Men and women flocked in such numbers to today's first sale, at fixed prices, of training planes declared surplus by the army that the New York offices of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which managed the sale, had to rush emergency banking arrangements to the Albany airport and to the Solberg-Hunterdon air port at Readington, N. J., where sales for this district were held. The planes heretofore had been offered for sale by sealed bid with disappointing results.

Today 15 of 35 Fairchild Cornells and Boeing Kaydets were sold at Readington and 12 of 24 at Albany for a total of $19,000 and $14,430, respectively. Prices averaged $875 to $1,990 for planes costing the government $10,000 to $15,000.

Most numerous among the buyers were individuals planning to use the planes for sport or pleasure. Almost all were pilots and flew away the planes. Among them were many operators of small air ports and schools and a few brokers and dealers.

GRUMMAN AIR NET EARNINGS NEAR 5 MILLION

New York, April 6 [Special]—Gross sales of Grumman Aircraft Engineering corporation in 1944 rose to a new high of $323,749,331, compared with $278,695,001 in 1943, the company reported today. Net income was $4,944,877, equal to $9.53 a share on 508,060 shares, against $3,343,201, or $6.58 a share, in 1943. Profit was computed in each instance after post-war refund of excess profit taxes and post-war readjustment provisions.

The company provided 2 million dollars for post-war readjustment in 1944, against $3,255,000 in 1943, increasing the reserve for that purpose of 4½ million dollars as of Dec. 31, 1944. Current assets were $75,340,129 and current liabilities $65,804,452. The company reached an agreement on renegotiation of 1944 contracts on Dec. 18, providing for a refund of $18,633,820 to the government.

FRANCE TO BUY LARGE SUPPLIES OF BRITISH WOOL

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—France has arranged to buy large quantities of stockpiled British wool in both the United States and England, the French supply mission said today. Procurement of raw materials has been a fundamental of the French rehabilitation program so that factory wheels may start rolling again and people return to work.

Altho exact figures are lacking, the quantity which France is buying directly from Britain without lend-lease is believed to be 140 million pounds. The British built substantial stock piles of wool from Australia in the United States early in the war when it was considered likely that shipping from the Pacific might be seriously interrupted.

Mather Tower Purchased for Half-Million

BY AL CHASE

The 42 story Mather Tower, 75 E. Wacker dr., which in 1927 represented an investment in land and building of $2,617,040, yesterday was sold at auction before Circuit Judge Miner for $560,000 cash. Precautions were taken to keep the identity of the buyer secret. Charles D. Satinover, of the law firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautman, Levinson & Morse, was successful bidder. He said Miss Florence Dietrich was nominee for the buyer.

Later it was learned that Miss Dietrich was taking title for J. S. Sherman, president of the Park Sherman company, 230 E. Ohio st., maker of metal specialties. Sherman could not be reached, but it was reported that he represented a large corporation.

Denies Buying Building

Carroll Sudler of Sudler & Co., who was a co-broker with the George S. Lurie company, said the new owner would rebuild the lobby, make other improvements, and change the name. The buyer will move his offices to the tower, he said.

Proceeds of the sale will be used as part of an endowment for the Alonzo Mather Aged Ladies' home under the will of Alonzo Mather, builder of the tower.

Sold by Home Trustees

Sellers of the tower were the trustees of the home. They are the Chicago Title and Trust company, Frank Watkins [a nephew of Alonzo Mather and president of Mather Stock Car company] and J. Mather Watkins.

The nine story Hotel Guyon, at the northwest corner of Pulaski rd. and Washington blvd., was sold by the United Guyon corporation to George J. London and J. Galper, hotel operators, for a reported price of slightly less than half a million dollars. The transaction was made thru Arthur J. Freer, hotel and chain store broker.

The hotel was sold in 1943 for $425,000. It contains 305 rooms and was built in 1928 for a reported $1,650,000 by the late J. Louis Guyon, who also built Guyon's Paradise ballroom nearby.

Walgreen Sales Decline 1.9 Per Cent in Month

Walgreen company yesterday reported March sales were $9,972,977, a decline of 1.9 per cent from a year earlier. Volume in the first quarter of 1945 dipped 2.1 per cent to $28,026,454.

RAILS' FREIGHT REVENUES MAY DROP IN PEACE

Decreased Average Haul Expected

Even if United States factories maintain output at high levels after the war, railroad revenues will drop substantially if the average freight haul is reduced from the war time figure to that normal in peace time, said C. E. Johnston, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, yesterday. If the railroads are to maintain efficiency after the war, they must receive fair treatment in government plans for post-war transportation, he warned.

Johnston said that altho government estimates placed national production in 1944 at double that of any peace time year, the freight tonnage loaded by the railroads was only about an eighth higher than the 1929 peak. Because of the gigantic war time job being done by the rail carriers, the misconception has arisen that tonnage being loaded far exceeds that of any peace time year, he said.

Average Haul Longer

"The volume of service performed by the railroads in 1944 comes closer to government estimates of national production," he continued. "Measured in ton-miles, it was two-thirds higher than the 1929 peak. The explanation of this is that under war time conditions freight is being moved much longer distances than in peace time. Actually the freight tonnage loaded by the railroads in 1944 was only about 12½ per cent more than in 1929, but the average haul per ton was 242 miles, compared with 182 miles in 1929.

"Current war time revenues reflect, for the most part, this war time increase in the average haul rather than the increase in the tonnage originated. From the standpoint of post-war planning this is most significant, because even if national production is maintained at high levels after the war a sharp decrease will result in volume of transportation performed and in railway revenues if the average haul is reduced to the pre-war figure.

Two Billion Decrease Likely

"A decrease after the war of one-eighth in volume of railway tonnage originated, accompanied by contraction of the average haul to the 1929 basis, would reduce volume of railroad service, measured in ton-miles, about one-third, and freight revenues more than 2 billion dollars."

Johnston said that altho some of the reduction in revenue probably could be made up by increased operating efficiency, it will be necessary, if the railroads are to be maintained on a sound footing, to consider rate levels, now virtually on a pre-war basis, and the higher wages, taxes, and other costs now in effect.

"Post-war projects which call for expanding the country's transportation facilities thru the expenditure of billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money for highways, air fields, and inland waterways, should be reexamined from the standpoint of what the public expects from the railroads after the war," he said. "Future governmental policies with respect to other forms of transportation will determine whether the railroads are to remain self-supporting, and the extent to which they can maintain full employment in the rehabilitation and modernization of their facilities."

Stock Market Moves Higher, but Trade Holds at Low Level

New York, April 6 (AP)—Many stock market leaders advanced fractions to more than a point today, but the recovery was slow, and numerous customers again stood aside to await more Russian-Japanese developments and war news.

Altho the idea the world conflict may have been shortened by recent events buoyed issues of companies considered to have minor reconversion problems, those with definite armament ratings made little if any headway. Dividends, earnings and individual situations inspired a certain amount of bidding.

Dealings, active at the opening, soon dwindled, but expanded toward the close. Transfers were 610,000 shares, compared with 680,000 yesterday. The Associated Press 60 stock average was up 0.3 at 60.4.

Sterling Drug Higher

Sterling Drug common rose 3 points to a 1945 peak in response to a stock split proposal. Superior Oil of California, off 4½ yesterday, retrieved 3½ on a pleasing earnings statement.

Advancing were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, North American, American Water Works, Sears Roebuck, Kennecott, Texas company, Eastern Air Lines, Grumman Aircraft, Sunshine Mining, International Nickel, United States Rubber, Westinghouse Electric, du Pont, Radio corporation and J. C. Penney.

BOND PRICES IRREGULAR

New York, April 6 (AP)—The bond market today was slow and irregular, but a tendency toward improvement in rail loans developed late. Turnover was $6,763,000, compared with $8,640,000 yesterday.

Milwaukee 5s of 1975, Rock Island refunding 4s of 1934, Colorado and Southern 4½s, International Great Northern 6s, Milwaukee and Northern 4½s, and Northern Pacific 5s advanced fractions to about 2 points. Baltimore and Ohio 1995s, New Haven 3½s, and Wisconsin Central 4s were lower.

CHICAGO LIST UNEVEN.

Prices were irregular in turnover of 24,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. More active issues included Automatic Washer, up ⅛ to a new 1945 high of 4¾; Chicago corporation common, up ⅜; Peabody Coal and Middle West corporation, both unchanged, and Libby, McNeill, down ⅛.

SURPLUS BOARD RULE STRIPS RFC OF POWER OVER LAND DISPOSAL

Washington, D. C., April 6 (AP)—Disposal of surplus farm and forest lands will be handled by the department of agriculture instead of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the surplus property board announced today. This represented a victory for Secretary Wickard and leaders of several farm organizations.

The board assigned disposal of grazing and mineral lands to the department of interior. Land owned by the government in connection with housing developments was assigned to the national housing agency and all real property not otherwise classified to the federal works agency.

Assistant Secretary of State Will L. Clayton, when he was surplus property administrator before creation of the board, had assigned the disposal of all real property to the RFC, but farm leaders, supported by Wickard, complained this might lead to "uneconomic" farming. The department contended that the land should be disposed of to create family unit farms and that much submarginal land should not be returned to farming.

SHORTS' BUYING LIFTS MAY RYE PRICE TO $1.31

Advances 5 Cents Before Reacting

For the third time this week May rye climbed 5 cents a bushel, the permissible limit, yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. It sold at $1.31, a new high mark since early last May. Profit taking caused a reaction, and the close was at net gains of 2⅜ to 3½ cents.

Wheat futures rose ⅝ to 1⅛, and corn ¼ to ⅝. Oats were unchanged to ¼ higher and barley gained ⅛ to ¼.

Short Covering Is Factor

Short covering was responsible largely for the extended upturn in May rye, brokers said. At the peak the price was 16½ cents above the low of last week. Talk of additional government inquiries for cash rye was heard, but no business could be confirmed. Chicago brokers said they had no bids for cash rye.

Chicago stocks of rye are expected to show a reduction of 1 million bushels or more this week if ships scheduled to load are able to clear for eastern ports today. This would cut the total below 7 million bushels, the smallest supply since June, 1943.

Speculative trading in rye futures this week has averaged 23 million bushels daily. Uncompleted contracts for May rye have been reduced about 6 million bushels in the last two weeks to about 19 million outstanding at the opening yesterday.

Cash Wheat Bought

Mills and commission houses were reported selling wheat futures on the minor upturns and May fell short by ⅛ cent of equalling the seasonal high established early in the week. Cash wheat continued to bring ceiling prices, and Minneapolis reported about 1 million bushels purchased Thursday for deferred shipment, buyers paying the permissible maximum price. Since Aug. 1 receipts of cash wheat at Minneapolis have been 40 million bushels, or 60 million bushels less than in the same period of the 1943-'44 crop year.

A sale of 300,000 bushels or more cash corn for shipment to Mexico was reported. Cash oats were quoted 2 to 3 cents lower with sales at 9⅛ cents under the ceiling. Kansas City oats declined 2 cents and Minneapolis 2 to 3 cents.

You can't see whiskey-wisdom—but it's there in every drop of Imperial. Hiram Walker has been acquiring it through all the years since 1858—it makes that difference you expect in fine whiskey.

IMPERIAL
Hiram Walker's Blended Whiskey

The $333 of excise tax paid on every barrel of whiskey . . . more than one billion dollars a year from the distilling industry . . . is only a fraction of America's war cost. It takes all the money you can put into war bonds, too! Buy more . . . hold them!

86 Proof. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old. 30% straight whiskey. 70% neutral spirits distilled from grain. Hiram Walker & Sons Inc., Peoria, Illinois
